$10,000 GOWN ROBBERY IN BOYLSTON ST. SHOP

Burglars, working on a wholesale scale almost within 200 yards of Boston police headquarters, early today cleaned out the Patten Gown Shop at 472 Boylston street and carried off expensive gowns and other apparel valued by the proprietor at $10,000.

One or more automobiles are believed to have been used in transferring the loot.

The break was discovered by William F. Sheldon, the janitor, shortly after 6 o'clock.

A coincidence in the robbery was the presence of the A. D. T. men and the police of the Back Bay station in the vicinity shortly before the looting of the gown shop was discovered. At 5.05, the A. D. T. service, which is always on the job night or day, received a bell alarm from No. 468 Boylston street, one of

Ex-Wife Says Chaplin Sought Solitude

In this third installment Mildred Harris, Chaplin's first wife, continues her description of Charlie Chaplin's moods. "He is a victim of his own temperament," she writes.

By MILDRED HARRIS.

(Copyright, 1927, by Mildred Harris. Reproduction, whole, or in part, prohibited.)

I realized, of course, that an artist like Chaplin would not be like an ordinary man, and I did not resent his silence then—not until I came to know that his moods were all-powerful.

Sometimes, after I had tried to talk to him and he had not answered a word, I would kiss him good-night and retire. He would return my kiss, absently, and sink back into his brooding.

At other times he would come home, speak to me in a few monosyllables, and then take up his violin. For hours I have heard him improvising the weirdest, saddest music. He was lost in his playing.

There were still other times when he was restless.

"I must get away—I must be alone," he would say.

And then he would go out for long lonely tramps over the hills, always alone.

He never wanted anyone with

12 HOMES DAMAGED IN RUSH BY FLAMES; EIGHT TOWNS BATTLE BLAZE

Threatening the entire city of Woburn, fire today destroyed three factories, damaged several other buildings and 12 dwellings, at a loss estimated by Fire Chief Frank Tracey at $200,000, and drove a score of families into the streets.

After flames, accompanied by explosions of chemicals, had devoured two factory buildings at Jefferson avenue and Prospect street, sparks leaped a half-mile to Eastern avenue and ignited a third plant, which was also totally destroyed.

Four firemen were injured. One, Joseph P. McKay, a veteran of 40 years' service, suffered a fracture of the skull when struck by a hose nozzle which napped from the hands of himself and two other firemen.

'DADDY' SAYS: 'MY WIFE FRAMED ME; SHE'LL WIN'

New York, Feb. 2.—While counsel for both sides in the Browning separation suit were preparing their briefs today, "Daddy," smarting under his girl bride's charges, predicted that "Peaches" will win the famous case.

"You know how it is—a woman always has ninety-nine chances out of a hundred," he said, most of his earlier optimism gone.

"My wife's case was all a big frameup. I wasn't permitted to call my witnesses, who were ready to attack Peaches' character."

Judge Seeger, who presided over the trial, is expected to take a month in considering the briefs and testimony in the case before rendering his decision.

"Peaches," in a last attack on "Daddy," admitted that she had written fervid love notes to Browning, but in the same breath added that Browning had stood beside her typewriter, threatening her with all manner of punishment if she did not write the notes and make them truly billets doux.

In support of her charge of coercion, she pointed to the fact that her love-notes were written on

TO QUESTION UNCLE ON SLAIN GIRL'S FRIENDS

Questioning of Angus MacRitchie, uncle of Maybelle Matheson, in regard to information he may have gained in Nova Scotia while attending her funeral, was delayed today when police learned that the murdered girl's uncle would not arrive in Boston until tomorrow.

Upon his arrival here MacRitchie will be asked to try to recollect every man he ever heard his niece mention, his memory being aided by the little red diary in which Maybelle kept names and addresses of all her friends.

Police Inspectors, District Attorney William J. Foley, his assistant, William H. McDonald, and Captain James P. Smith had a long conference today. Inspectors Pierce, Leary, Conroy, Harrow, Morrissey, Driscoll and others discussed the case.

3 FACTORIES BURN

Eight cities and towns were called on for help, and the entire Woburn department was summoned by a general alarm. Medford, Melrose Winchester, Arlington, Lexington, Stoneham, Reading and Wakefield rendered aid.

Several hundred men and girl workers are out of work as a result of the disastrous fire.

Captain M. J. Cuneo and John Kerrigan of Engine 3, Woburn, were injured when the driver of another engine, blinded by smoke, ran into them.

Engineman James McGovern was severely bruised by falling timbers.

The fire started from an undetermined cause in the Alfred Peterson Patent Leather Company plant, a two-story frame structure. The flames had spread to the Marin Heel Company four-story wooden factory before firemen reached the scene.

Across Jefferson avenue the lumber yard of the Barker Lumber Company was saved, but two sheds were damaged and one practically destroyed.

While firemen fought the flames in this locality a strong wind carried sparks over the entire district, igniting the roof of one dwelling after another, and firemen ran into the house to warn the families to get ready to leave with their belongings.

A small boy, James Gallagher of Vernon street, discovered that sparks had set fire to the patent leather plant and tannery of James Robertson & Son in Eastern avenue, and the house of George Elliot nearby. He ran and notified Chief Tracey, who put some of the out-of-town apparatus to work there. The Robertson factory could not be saved.

Miss Grace Praira, bookkeeper of the Barker Lumber Company, who was at home when she learned of the fire, hurried to the scene and risked her life to carry valuable records from the office while flames were threatening the building.

Police reserves were called out by Chief McAulay to hold in check a large crowd of spectators who were threatening to interfere with the fire-fighters. Handling of the crowd was difficult because of the large area over which the fire spread.

Heavy smoke hung over the district and this drove out several families as it poured into their houses. The west wind, although it helped to spread the flames, probably saved the centre of the city.

There was considerable water and smoke damage in addition to the loss by flames.

Fireman McKay, after being treated on the scene by two doctors, was carried to his home in Clinton street and later to Choate Memorial Hospital.

McKay was not on duty, but the general alarm called him to the fire. He is 58 years old and has four children.

The destroyed heel factory employs 50 girls, in addition to many men. The two patent leather factories employ about 200 men and girls. The loss of these plants is a real blow to the families who counted on them for a weekly income.

Two Medford firemen, C. H. Cahalan and F. T. Warner, went into 10 houses to warn the occupants and help them get their belongings together. Fire extinguishers were sufficient to put out most of the roof fires, but the home of George Elliott was badly damaged and the family, in bed at the time, had a narrow escape.

BACK BAY GOWN SHOP LOOTED

its clients, and four doors away from the Patten Gown Shop which does not have the A. D. T. service, although earlier stories state that it did.

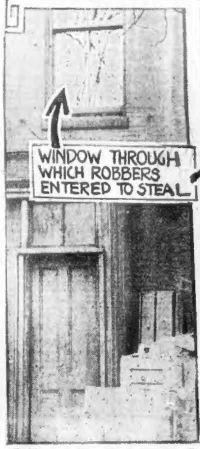
Immediately upon receipt of the call the A. D. T. headquarters notified Back Bay police station of the supposed trouble at 468, and within a few minutes two A. D. T. men, a police lieutenant and nine patrolmen were in front of 468 and going through the store. A loose transom of a rear door was the cause of the alarm. This was fixed, the building locked up, and the men went on their way.

Four doors away at No. 472 the gown shop looters went on with their work.

That the thieves knew the value of the goods they were taking was evident from the fact that nearly every gown of an expensive nature was taken. In fact, the investigating officers, declared that the clean-up was one of the most thorough that has been called to their attention in the exclusive shopping district of the Back Bay

Little aid is expected from the bar, however, as the high-class gown shop looter like his brother, the safe cracksman, has taken to wearing gloves at work to eliminate all chances of fingerprints.

With the arrival of the first employes the shop was found to have been looted as completely as though it had been moving day.



Robbers at No. 472 Boylston St. pried open window with iron bar, which they left.

Patten Gown Shop in the Back Bay was robbed of its most expensive gowns, showing the burglars' knowledge of what was what in ladies' apparel.

BAN ON NEGRO VOTER ARGUED

Washington, Feb. 2. (A. P.)—The right to exclude negroes from Democratic primaries in Texas was asserted by Attorney-General Pollard of that state in a brief today in Supreme Court, in a case brought by L. A. Nixon.

Contending that primaries are not elections, within the meaning of the Federal constitution, the brief asserted that the right to inject one's self into the nominating primary of a political party is not a right which can be enforced in the Federal courts.

Local officers of a political party it was argued have the right to refuse to permit a negro to participate in a primary of their party when it refuses to recognize negroes as members of the party. The law of Texas sanctions such a refusal, the Attorney-General said.

The progress made by the Ford company since 1916, Prentice said, was so rapid that it was impossible to strike an average for stock valuations. He pointed out that during the "panic years" of 1907 and 1908, when industrial stocks declined generally, the shares of the Ford Motor Company forged ahead.

At Kenmore Station buses were pressed into service some time after the tieup and many commuters were taken in town by way of Boylston street. No outbound cars were affected by the tieup, according to "L" officials.

The delay caused inconvenience to many commuters who use the Lechmere square-East Cambridge line and made it necessary for them to use the tunnel trains to Cambridge and change at Harvard square in a roundabout way to East Cambridge.

HUB LEADERS SEE SHIPS' COMING AS BOOM SIGNAL

12 VESSELS TO GIVE N. E. ITS BIG CHANCE

The port of Boston particularly, and all New England generally, will benefit by the allocation to the Hub of twelve Shipping Board vessels engaged in the South American trade, it was declared today by leading Bostonians.

In Boston shipping circles the news that the American Republics Line operating management had been assigned to this city, was hailed as the forerunner of a boom.

Following are the comments of several authorities:

FRANK S. DAVIS, manager of Maritime Association, Boston Chamber of Commerce: None of the other Shipping Board routes is so valuable or offers such opportunities to New England as this, and it now remains for shippers to obtain the full benefit of it in reaching the wonderful markets of South America. New England trade with South America should receive great impetus.

WILLIAM F. CLARKE, traffic manager for B. F. Sturtevant Company, Hyde Park: A splendid achievement, and one that is welcome to merchants who ship to South America.

ANDREW J. PETERS, president, Boston Chamber of Commerce, and former Mayor of Boston: I am very gratified to learn of the allocation of the monagement to the Republics Line to Boston. Now it is the opportunity for the shippers of Boston to respond by shipping direct to South America. The port of Boston has been recognized

HOWARD COONLEY, former president Boston Chamber of Commerce: "A very happy conclusion of a move to further the interests of the port of Boston. It means the clearing of more tonnage from the port of Boston and it shows also that the shipping board feels that Boston is a better selection than the city of New Lork.

MAYOR MALCOLM E. NICHOLS: It is the biggest piece of news affecting the city that has come out of Washington in a long time.

COHASSET GIRL OF 9 IS GIVEN $220,000 LEGACY

PASTOR'S CHILD WEALTHIEST AT ACADEMY

Nine-year-old Mary S. Wilson, daughter of the Rev. Charles Chase Wilson, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church, Cohasset, today is the rich little girl of Derby Academy, for under her grandfather's will she has inherited a fortune approximating $220,000.

Her grandfather was Louis Crawford Clark of the New York banking firm of Clark, Dodge & Company. He had made his home in Burlington, Vt. He left an estate estimated at $4,000,000. Her mother was Miss Mary Louise Clark, whose marriage to the Rev. Mr. Wilson was postponed for several months because of a breach of promise suit brought against the rector by Laura Louise Johnson of Minneapolis.

At that time the Rev. Mr. Wilson was rector of the Church of Our Saviour in Roslindale, and trial of the case attracted widespread attention. Miss Johnson, who had met Rev. Mr. Wilson while she was a co-ed at the University of Vermont, where he also was a student, said she had always considered she was his fiancee, and knew nothing of Miss Clark until she read announcement of the coming marriage.

Miss Johnson told of being kissed by the rector, and the defense brought out that other students also had kissed Miss Johnson. The trial was in 1915 and Rev. Mr. Wilson's parishioners stood staunchly by him.

Miss Johnson was awarded a verdict of $3,625, but this later was set aside. Thus the case ended. The first Mrs. Wilson died in 1922, and a year later Rev. Mr. Wilson married again. His second wife was Harriet Cordingley, daughter of William R. Cordingley of Chestnut Hill.

GIRL IS NINTH STUDENT TO KILL SELF

The "Suicide Class of 1927" took in a new graduate from life today out in Chicago, almost at the same time that President Daniel L. Marsh of Boston University, speaking in Chicago, was blaming a materialistic conception of the universe for students' suicides.

As ninth and latest member of the tragedy class of collegians who have ended their lives thus far in 1927, Bernice Richardson, 20-year-old Milliken College co-ed, was enrolled today.

Her tragic end brought the number of girl-student-suicides to two in thirty days, as against seven boys in the same space of time—aggregately an average of one suicide in three days.

Officials and faculty members of colleges in the Middle West, where the bulk of the suicides have occurred, began today to study the problem.

President Marsh indicated by his address before the Board of Education of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Chicago that he has already begun a study of the condition.

"When you convince a man that he is an animal and nothing but an animal," said the B. U. president, "he will act like an animal and you will have a recrudescence of the jungle."

WINTER STAYS 6 WEEKS, SAYS GROUNDHOG

The groundhog saw his shadow at noon today.

Six more weeks of Winter.

When Sir Arctomys Monax, as he is dignifiedly known, ventured forth at midday the bright sun and perfectly clear sky were so discouraging, he went right back again.

To refresh your memory on the ancient legend, if "Archie" sees his shadow we will be doomed to another six weeks of frigid temperatures and high coal bills. If it is cloudy and there is no shadow he stays out, gives three cheers or squeaks and ejaculates "Spring is here."

Records show that the groundhog has been a faulty prognosticator. According to his most prominent rival, the official weather forecaster, he is usually wrong.

Anyhow, you can check up for yourself and after 99 years you will know whether the groundhog legend is worth believing.

Courageous pansies, full blown, were found growing in the open at Springfield today. At any rate, that was the story of the persons who produced them. Down New Haven way, pussy willows were reported pushing out the first white tips on their buds.

JURY CHANGES MIND, HANGS

After finding a Boston man guilty on a liquor smuggling charge, a Federal jury changed its mind today and reported a disagreement.

The jurors had deliberated five hours when they reported to Judge George F. Morris that they found Fred J. Bush guilty, but were unable to agree on a verdict in the case of Bush's co-defendant, Thomas C. Craven.

Judge Morris, deciding they should deliberate longer, refused to accept the report, thus reopening the case of Bush as well as that of Craven. After 21 hours of discussion the jurors reported a double disagreement and Judge Morris dismissed them.

A new trial was set for next Tuesday. Bush, Craven and twelve others were indicted on the smuggling charge, which included the allegation that 3,000 cases of liquor were landed at Commercial Wharf in May, 1925. Hhe other twelve pleaded guilty, leaving Bush and Craven to stand trial alone.

ALARM FAILS IN SCHOOL FIRE

While teachers waited in vain for fire apparatus to respond to a box alarm, a fire burned briskly below today in the basement of the Atherton School in Columbia road, near Geneva avenue, Dorchester.

Janitor Edward M. Murphy finally drowned out the fire with buckets of water, holding the damage down to a low figure.

The blaze was discoverde by Miss Redding, a teacher, who saw smoke coming from the basement.

She opened the fire alarm signal box on the school building and pulled the hook as directed, but apparently because the box was out of commission, no apparatus responded.

The fire occurred at a comparatively fortunate time, when the pupils were on their way to classes and when only a few had arrived in the building.

STANDARD OIL has bought one of the new Ford all-metal monoplanes, with three engines doing 100 miles an hour, carrying twelve passengers. The Standard Oil airship will be a flying Standard Oil office, with typewriting machines, tables and cots, to be used by executives and their secretaries.

That brings real American flying nearer.

AMERICAN business men with things to sell will be glad to know that Russia is in the market with cash to pay for things. Today, lined up on a railroad loading platform, were three hundred Fordson tractors, part of one Russian order for 3,500 of them.

RUSSIAN farmers using those tractors will soon have money to buy automobiles and will get them in America. Anybody worried about the automobile industry might as well stop worrying.

THE CROP of young people, produced by a population of 118,000,000, will keep calling for new cars as it reaches the license age, and will get them.

Some will learn with sorrow that it is unwise to force exaggerated credits. Otherwise, there is no fly in the automobile ointment.

THE LATEST idea in buying cars is the "twin motors" plan. "One car to a family" is old-fashioned. You might as well say, "One pair of wings to a nest full of birds." What would the other birds do while one was flying?

UNLIKE HORSES, automobiles do not eat when not working. The "twin car" idea will spread, especially in suburbs and country, where the garage problem is simple. One car for the young people, another for older people, will be more and more the minimum equipment, in each progressive family.

Some will moan "extravagance," but Americans will get more out of life, which is short at best.

MERCHANTS know that business is tending toward bigger and bigger units, and will be interested in the consolidation of two important department stores in Detroit.

Mr. Richard H. Webber, president of the J. L. Hudson Company, announced the purchase of Newcomb-Endicott by the J. L. Hudson company.

Bigger business means bigger buying power and, therefore, better buying.

MICHIGAN, which abolished capital punishment long since in its march toward civilization, now discusses a return to the gallows. Some believe that crime cannot be discouraged without hanging or some kind of killing, that you must fight private murder with public murder. They are wrong.

BOSTON young women taking a course in secretarial duties wrote the Ten Commandments in the order of their importance, as they saw it. Two put last "Thou Shalt Not Kill." The majority vote put "Honor Thy Father and Thy Mother" first, an excellent selection, and, last of all, "Remember the Sabbath Day to Keep It Holy," which is in keeping with the times.

GLADSTONE, ON STAND, WILL NOT RETRACT

London, Feb. 2.—Viscount Gladstone, taking the stand today in Captain Peter Wright's suit, declined to withdraw his characterization of Wright as a "liar, coward and foul fellow."

Ostensibly defending himself against Captain Wright's suit, Lord Gladstone in reality seeks to vindicate the memory of his father, the great Victorian prime minister, who is pictured in Wright's book, "Portraits and Criticisms," as immoral and a hypocrite.

REFUSES TO WITHDRAW.

On the stand today Lord Gladstone described Wright's allegations against his father as "foul, revolting and false." He refused to withdraw the words used in his letters to the committee of the Bath Club, on which document Captain Wright's suit is based.

Lord Gladstone testified that he had been very close to his distinguished father and that until 1885, he had always lived with the elder Gladstone, at the Carlton House or in Downing street, the official residence of the prime minister.

60 YEARS TOGETHER.

His father and mother lived together for nearly sixty years, and their relationship was perfect, Lord Gladstone said. Throughout their lives they devoted themselves to the reclamation of fallen women, working together in that cause.

In the course of the work, the elder Gladstone spoke to such women in the streets and persisted in his rescue work regardless of the misconstruction which the world might put on his actions.

NOVIKOFF LETTERS.

Viscount Gladstone stated that he had known personally Olga Novikoff, the Russian diplomatist whom Wright charged wielded an influence over the Victorian Premier.

There was no secrecy about the meetings between Novikoff and William E. Gladstone, the viscount testified, and in 23 years of correspondence between the two "there was not the slightest hint of impropriety nor the slightest ground for saying that Novikoff induced the Far Eastern policy of my father."

Viscount Gladstone denied that his father had connived at the liaison between Parnell and the famous Kitty O'Shea, one of the lurid pages of British political history.

Asked what proof he offered that the letters introduced in court as those exchanged between William E. Gladstone and Olga Novikoff were authentic, Viscount Gladstone shouted, "My honor."

"Mine, too," piped up Henry Gladstone, 74-year-old brother of the viscount, who sat in the courtroom.

Lord Gladstone declared it was a lie to say that his father had connived at the relationship between Mrs. O'Shea and Charles Stewart Parnell, noted Irish Liberal leader, as stated by Captain Wright.

Religion was the deepest passion of his father's life, from first to last, Lord Gladstone avowed. Later the witness said he was certainly not actuated by malice against Wright, adding: "I am sorry for him."

CANADIAN CLUB CONDUCTS CHARITY BALL TONIGHT

G. Heinemann and Miss Dorothy Hanna. For those who do not care to dance there will be whist in the state ballroom.

Among the distinguished patrons of the ball this year are Governor and Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller, the British Ambassador and Lady Howard, Mayor and Mrs. Malcolm E. Nichols, and the Governor-General of Canada, Viscount Wellington and Viscountess Wellington.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy cheeks—sparkling eyes—most women can have. Dr. F. M. Edwards for 20 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave his patients a substitute for calomel made of a few well-known vegetable ingredients mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. Know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which cause a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets nightly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets — now and then to keep fit. 15c, 30c and 60c.

NURSE POINTS TO WINTERS AS ATTACKER

Woodstock, Vt., Feb. 2.—Pointing dramatically to John C. Winters, on trial here for the murder of Miss Cecelia Gullivan, and declaring, "There is the man," Mrs. Bessie Pandjiris, nurse, one of the State's star witnesses, provided a thrill today at the conclusion of her story of the alleged attack upon her by Winters prior to the Gullivan slaying.

The State claims Winters first went to the home of Miss "Tottie" Evarts in Windsor, where Mrs. Pandjiris was employed as a nurse, and there engaged in a terrific struggle with her. A bloodstained nightgown said to have been worn by the nurse, together with a handful of hair torn from her head, had been shown as exhibits.

BATTLES WITH HIM.

"I was awakened by a noise in the room," Miss Pandjiris testified.

"I could make out some object going toward Tottie's bed. I switched on the light and it flashed into the face of a man I knew."

"Did you get a good look at him?" asked Special Prosecutor Raymond Trainor.

"Yes, a fine look," the nurse replied.

"I turned my light off, thinking he would go away," she continued. "He made a dash for my bed. He struck me on the left side of my head. I told him to let me alone and struck him with all my might on the chest.

"He said he would choke me if I made a sound. I did scream and he pulled me out of bed, choking me. I had a hard struggle with him and he finally got me face down on the floor.

OTHER WOMEN COME.

"We were about three feet from Tottie's bed. I heard her cry faintly for Miss Fowle, a roomer, and Miss Stack, the cook. He continued choking me."

She told how the intruder had pulled out her hair and otherwise mistreated her, and how the two other women came running down the stairs. As they turned on the light, she said, the man fled.

Miss Pandjiris after relating the coming of the police, was asked by Special Prosecutor Trainor, "Who was that man?"

"John Winters," declared Miss Pandjiris, pointing her finger at the defendant.

King George Obeys London's One-Way Traffic Rules

London, Feb. 2 (A.P.)—King George is well posted on London's traffic congestion and has decided to follow the "rotary traffic" in one-way streets when nearing Buckingham Palace.

Heretofore it has been the rule for the royal car to pass through a special gate called the "privy purse" entrance, on the extreme right of the palace front.

The King however, has given orders that his chauffeur follow the merry-go-round and enter the gate on the left so that there shall be no traffic holdup.

EX-DRY AGENT HELD IN RAIDS

Cohasset, Feb. 2.—Two stills, 600 gallons of alcohol and other supplies were seized and two arrests were made in raids today by Police Chief William McArthur and four patrolmen.

The men under arrest are Patsy Feola, a former prohibition agent, and Harris Monk.

The raiders went first to Feola's home in Doane street and found the still in operation, they claim. Manufacturing was going on also at Monk's place at Whitney Crossing, police say.

Feola and Monk were taken to Quincy for arraignment on charges of illegally manufacturing liquor.

HUB SOLDIERS GOING TO CHINA

At San Francisco the troops enlisted from the eastern section of the country will join the men accepted from the Sixth Seventh and Ninth Corps areas. All will sail from San Francisco for the Far East on March 31 aboard the U. S. Army transport Thomas.

The departing force will be under the command of Colonel Charles Hill, it is understood.

The transport Thomas will load on the necessary provisions and supplies at San Francisco for the long voyage.

The American force now on duty on the Peking railway has suffered such heavy losses from expiring enlistments and discharges that the enlisting of these new men as replacement troops is made necessary.

President Coolidge called Senator Borah of the Senate foreign relations committee to the White House for a conference and it is understood that the China situation was the subject under discussion.

A large quantity of ammunition, together with guns and field equipment, will be taken along.

AMONG MARINES.

Twelve hundred marines, probably including many New Englanders, are making ready at San Diego for departure this week on the transport Chaumont for Far Eastern duty.

The San Diego marines, making up the Fourth Regiment, will be taken to Guam to replace those ordered to Manila, and will be available for emergency use by Admiral Williams commanding the Asiatic fleet.

War Leader

Widow of Sun Yat Sen, former provisional president of China, is directing Southern Chinese forces, and stays right at the front.

WOMAN LEADER IN CHINA WAR

Mrs. Sun Yat Sen, graduate of Wesleyan College and widow of the former provisional President of the Chinese Republic, is virtually leading the Southern China forces, or Cantonese, latest advices from the troubled China area declare.

This information comes from Bishop W. N. Ainsworth of the Methodist Episcopal Church South who has just returned to his headquarters at Macon, Ga., after many months in China.

That Mrs. Sun's forces will be in control of China by Spring is the prediction made by the churchman.

Her position among the Cantonese is practically that of a queen, it is explained. She is an official member of the executive staff of the Cantonese army and maintains her headquarters at the front, right in the danger zone, as the troops advance.

The reform movement now under way is largely under her direction, her brilliance as a leader being generally recognized by army leaders and civilians alike it is declared.

Madame Sun's life has many times been in danger in her labors in behalf of a better China. In 1921 she was kidnaped by mountain bandits and being a rare prize was held for a ransom of half a million dollars. [illegible] this predicament, she was in even greater peril the following year.

Madame Sun is a Christian, like her late husband.

MARY GARDEN MAKES 2D OPERA NIGHT AN 'OPENER'

By MOSES SMITH.

THE SECOND NIGHT'S performance of the opera was quite as brilliant in its way as the opening. Alfano's "Resurrection," which received its first presentation in Boston a year ago, was the attraction that brought out a crowd that once more filled the Boston Opera House.

But very likely the real magnet was Mary Garden, making her first appearance in the present run. Our Mary's name on the program always makes a sort of second opening night. The brilliant singing-actress remains the operatic queen in popularity.

"Resurrection" seems almost made to order for Miss Garden, who played the role of the unfortunate Katinska. In each of the four tableaux which make up the opera she is the chief personage, first the fair and lovable maid who is wooed and won by the Prince, then the abandoned creature waiting for her fickle lover at the railroad station, later the centre of a riotous gang of women prisoners in a Russian jail, and finally the reformed woman who has set her heart and head on forgetting the past and devoting her new-found energies to doing good for the world.

THE DRAMA did not pall on second acquaintance. Tolstoi's novel has been followed in essentials, not chronologically but in substance. Cesar Hanau, who wrote the libretto, has a skilled technique of the theatre, and in the four scenes has built up an effective, even powerful, play. The climaxes are well prepared, there is little of cheap melodrama, and above all the spirit of Tolstoi is ever present — Tolstoi the reformer, who loved his fellow-humans and saw good in the most desperate of them.

Of Alfano's music little more can be said than was apparent when we first heard it. The play's the thing in this opera and the music is there very likely, because you can't have an opera without music. It is not bad music, neither is it good music. What is most lacking is a striking personality, an individuality of style and expression that enables you to put your finger at random on a place in the score and say, "This is Alfano, and no other." Yet for all his lack of originality Alfano mates his music well to the text. It is a sort of running accompaniment to the drama, stormy when the action becomes violent, subsiding when things on the stage quiet done.

IN ONE PLACE Alfano has struck home. That is the opening of the fourth scene, where the mood of the play is beautifully suggested by the music. But elsewhere the score is like a very skilful patchwork of movie music, bits drawn from this or that composer and made to fit well the passing show.

Since the play was the thing it is well to report that the performance of the piece went ever better than the excellent premiere last year. The stage direction — for most of which, no doubt, Miss Garden herself deserves the credit—produced even better timed ensembles, meaningless gestures were reduced almost to nothing, and the principal players fitted in their characterizations more smoothly. The prison scene was a masterpiece of coordination and quite a credit to any dramatic company in this great land of freedom where the art of ensemble playing is in its infancy.

The cast was well chosen and performed brilliantly. First honors naturally go to Miss Garden, who has added, in Katinska one more to her long list of celebrated roles. Give this woman of genius free play in creating her character, see her when she is in the mood for brilliant acting, and you are quite sure to understand why James Huneker called her the superwoman.

VOCALLY MISS GARDEN was very satisfactory last night, employing an instrument more forceful and more free than usual. She hit very well, too, on the fine line between an operatic singer and an actress. When a mere spoken word was more suggestive, more natural, than tonal declamation, she used the spoken word.

Fernand Ansseau played the part of the Prince. Since the performance was in French, instead of the original Italian, Ansseau was very much at home. In fact he did as good a job last night as he has ever turned in here. His voice was at its best, a pleasure to the ear, never forced, always of good quality. And his stock of gestures was more varied than when he created the role last year.

ALL FOUR scenes were well set, the fourth so beautifully, indeed, that the audience burst into instinctive applause as soon as the curtain went up. The toy train in the station scene was a bit too clever, for it shot across so rapidly that one felt it was very much behind schedule.

Roberto Moranzoni conducted brilliantly, underscoring the action with dramatic understanding, never content merely to go through the motions. Pity the poor conductor, who must do the most work, possess the most varied talents, yet is often forgotten in the enthusiasm and excitement of a brilliant performance.

"Guilty" ∾ Dying Man's Story ∾ By Jean McDonough

(Copyright, 1927, by The Bell Syndicate, Inc.)

THEN CHARLES TOLD ME HIS story. "Last night I had some work to do," he began, "and had remained at my office later than usual. It was about 7:30 when I received a telephone call from a hospital, asking me to come immediately. A dying man, injured in an automobile accident, had asked to see me. Somehow I immediately connected this with the Davis case. I got my hat and coat and rushed out of the office.

"AT THE HOSPITAL I WAS ushered into the accident ward. The interne stopped at one of the white beds and pointed to the occupant. 'That's the man,' he said. The patient was a stranger to me. I looked at his ghastly white face for a moment, trying to remember if I had ever seen the man before! 'You'd better get him to tell you his story now,' the doctor whispered. 'He hasn't very much longer to live.'

"THEN HE LEFT ME ALONE with the man. The stranger began to speak in a faltering voice. 'Mr. Edwards,' he began, 'I have something to say to you that has been weighing heavily on my mind for the past few weeks.' He stopped to take breath and the effort seemed to cause him much pain. 'I want to tell you, Mr. Edwards,' . . . his words came in little gasps, 'that I know the man who murdered Alton!'

JUST THEN HE STRUGGLED again for breath. 'My God, I'm going to die,' he gasped. 'Edwards, I've got to get this off my chest before I go . . . get the doctor . . . hurry . . .' He began to cry deliriously. Then suddenly his head fell back onto the pillow. I looked at the pale, deathlike figure for a minute and noticed that he still breathed. There was no time to lose. I rushed out for the doctor. (Continued tomorrow.)

FAMOUS CLARK MANSION SOLD

New York, Feb. 2 (A. P.)—The $7,000,000 granite mansion of the former Senator William A. Clark, Montana copper king, is the latest Fifth avenue landmark to give way before New York's architectural renaissance.

Anthony Campagna, operator and builder, purchased the home for less than $3,000,000. A $7,000,000 twelve-story "mansion" apartment house, the suites of which will sell as high as $350,000, will be erected on the site.

The famous granite pile at Seventy-seventh street and Fifth Avenue, dubbed "Clark's Hobby" and "Clark's Folly" in prose and poetry, will be razed in a month.

French Words in Opera Make Hit With Boy

By PAUL WHELTON

PERHAPS IT WAS wrong, but a chap, during the "Resurrection" performance, couldn't help contrasting slim Mary Garden—the "slim" is correct—shivering between the fluttering flakes of an embryo Russian storm, with the stories of her health sun-baths in an open boat somewhere off somebody's twelve-mile limit.

Step right up like a man and meet Jack Baylis, the youngest—and most enthusiastic—attendant at "Resurrection." Jack acquired himself his twelfth birthday yesterday, and there was some speculation out at No. 28 Addington road, Brookline, as to just what he should do with it. When everybody else in the family had hit upon the exact right thing, Jack calmly upset the plans by announcing that it was grand opera he wanted.

Jack's dad, Lieutenant Commander J. S. Baylis, commanding the United States Coast Guard destroyer Paulding, now at the Boston Navy Yard, said that the boy was accumulating large portions of satisfaction at the opera from picking out French words and phrases he has been learning at the Runkle School in Brookline. The opera, you see, was a bit of an education.

MAYBE THIS can be figured out, and perhaps it cannot. Although "Aida" is a veteran of opera, a Princess getting along in years—and supposedly well known—and "Resurrection" is but a mere callow beginner in comparison, there were more librettos sold at the Opera House for "Aida" than there were for "Resurrection." The elderly lady of Verdi's, in a word, holds the upper register.

Out of the fog of the smoking room—yes, ladies and gentlemen together—and what of it?—a mile walker puffed on one, and announced that he was J. Frank Pierce of Westminster street, Providence, and had come to the performance because, being a daily commuter, he wanted to see how a railroad was run in this here Russia.

Clara Shear has deserted Malden. It's a fact! Back in the catacombs of the dressing rooms, she came up out of the greases and powders long enough to admit that she moved in town to a hotel when she found four rehearsals—all of different operas—on her menu for one day, and a performance to boot. But Clara didn't boot it. She never does.

INCIDENTALLY, Clara's kid sister, Judy, just graduated from Malden High School, put a tiny, pointed toe into the smallest and lowermost niche of the wall on whose top and crest is fame. Judy was a super in "Tableau IV." of "Resurrection."

If all the varieties of bobs seen in the Opera House promenade were placed end to end and lined up in opposition to the different types of long-haired coiffures—why, the bobs would be way ahead.

Several boxes were filled with beautiful girls from the New England Conservatory of Music. There wasn't a sharp or a flat in the entire band.

MR AND MRS. Arthur Adams of Jamaica Plain consented to say for publication that, somehow or other, Fate has worked against them and every year they miss "Aida," but that "Resurrection" was a compensation.

The six feet, and then some, of Harry W. Beatty, technical director for the Chicago Civic Opera Co., were decidedly necessary—every one of them—backstage at the Mary Garden performance. With sixty brawny "field hands" to direct in transforming a country house site into a bleak, snow-peppered outside of a Russian railroad station—and then transforming some more into a women's prison and a camp overland to Siberia—Beatty had a very pleasant evening.

COOLIDGE CAN STOP SHIPS

Washington, Feb. 2 (A.P.).—Amended to provide $1,200,000 for beginning work on three additional scout cruisers this year, which President Coolidge has advised against pending the outcome of steps for another disarmament conference; the naval appropriation bill was back in the House today for another vote on a proposition similar to one it has rejected.

The Senate passed the bill late yesterday without a record vote after adding several amendments, including one to begin construction of the three scouts, the last of eight authorized in 1924. The vote on the cruiser amendment was 49 to 27.

Despite its previous failure in the House in a somewhat modified form, Senate leaders predict the amendment will be approved by that body. The opinion also prevails that the President will sign the bill with this provision included.

Under the amendment, the President, if he wished, could direct the Navy Department to withhold letting of bids for the ships.

NEW 'PUSSYFOOT' IN DRIVE ON ENGLISH RUM SHOPS

London, Feb. 2 (I. N. S.)—Emil Louis Hohenthal of South Manchester, Conn., today announced his intention of launching a prohibition campaign in England.

"You can call me another 'pussyfoot' if you like," Hohenthal told English newspapermen. "I am out to close up your booze shops."

Sailors Duck Duke in Suds, Initiating 'Im For Ole King Nep

H. M. S., Renown, Feb. 2 (Wireless to Associated Press).—The Duke of York, King George's second son, now can properly call himself an old sea dog. He was, with his Duchess, duly initiated into King Neptune's kingdom today as the Renown crossed the equator in the Pacific en route to Australia.

The Duchess escaped the ducking which is a traditional part of the ceremony, but her royal spouse was chucked into a big canvas bath, where the "bears" soused him mercilessly. He emerged smilingly, as did his brother, the Prince of Wales, on a similar occasion. Before the ducking, the Duke was well lathered and shaved with a big wooden razor.

The ceremonies were carried out with exaggerated pomp and in elaborate costumes. A thousand other novices (crossing the equator for the first time) were initiated, and it required half the day to duck them all.

CONTINUAL dosing upsets children's delicate stomachs. Vicks is applied externally and therefore cannot disturb the digestion. It acts in two ways:
(1) The body heat releases the ingredients in the form of vapors which are inhaled.

CASTORIA
When Baby Complains.
There are many ways a baby has of expressing any pain or irregularity or digression from its normal condition of health and happiness. A short sharp cry, a prolonged irritated cry. Restlessness, a constant turning of the head or of the whole body, fretful. In these and other ways a baby tells you there is something wrong. Most mothers know that a disordered stomach, or bowels that do not act naturally are the cause of most of baby's sufferings. A call for the doctor is the first thought, but in the event of any delay there should be ready at hand a safe remedy such as Fletcher's Castoria.
Castoria has been used for baby's ailments for over 30 years and has merited the good will of the family physician in a measure not equaled by any other baby's medicine because of its harmlessness and the good results achieved.
And remember this: Castoria is essentially a baby's remedy and not a cure-all for every member of the family. What might help you is too often dangerous when given to a babe.
To avoid imitations, always look for the signature of Chas H Fletcher
Proven directions on each package. Physicians everywhere recommend it.

SHOOTS HIS WIFE; ENDS OWN LIFE

Son of Rich Ranch Owner Denounces Own Dad in Notes Baring Tragedy

Chicago, Feb. 2.—Harold Dickerson, son of a millionaire sportsman and ranch owner of Springfield, Mo., lies dead here today, while his bride of two months is fighting for life in a hospital following a tragic scene in their room at the Hotel Walton.

In what his wife described as a jealous rage, young Dickerson whipped out a revolver, fired at her three times and then sent a bullet into his own brain. He died instantly.

Police believe Dickerson's act was premeditated, at least the suicide part of the tragedy, as he left two notes, one of them addressed to his wealthy father in which he denounced his parent for alleged mistreatment.

BLAMES HIS FATHER.

It says in part:

"Dear Dad: I am killing myself tonight and I hope you are satisfied. I, too, was your son, but for any help I ever got from you I might as well have been a stranger. I'm through with life. Take your ranch and leave it to whom you please.

"A fraction of what you have thrown away would have saved one—well, enjoy this as I know you will. The papers will tell you all about it."

His bride, formerly Lucille Peterson, of Chicago, said her husband had accused her of caring for a former suitor. She said they quarreled. Then he sat down and began to write. Without warning, she said, he wheeled from the desk, pulled out a revolver and began shooting.

BRIDE FEARED FOR LIFE.

In the second note, Richard wrote that his estrangement from his father was the result of "a mistake I made as a small boy." The note read: "Look up the Grand Rapids, Mich., newspaper clips of September 5, 1913."

It was learned these clips show that young Dickerson was arrested in connection with the disappearance of a James Gray, still an unsolved mystery.

Dickerson was found shot in a boat near Grand Rapids, according to the clips. He claimed Gray had shot him and jumped overboard. But Gray's body was never found.

In Dickerson's room police found a decree of separate maintenance granted Mrs. Edith Dickerson of St. Louis in January in 1925.

Dickerson's bride told police she had married him because she was afraid he would kill her if she did not.

Dickerson was 29 years old. His father is Col R. P. Dickerson of Conway and Springfield, Mo. It was on Col. Dickerson's ranch at Conway that Stanley Ketchel, the middleweight champion of the world, was murdered in 1910.

AGED MAN NEAR DEATH, MISTAKES GAS FOR LIGHT

A combination gas and electric light fixture nearly caused the death of Peter Beldoc, 79, of Salem, N. H. today as a result of turning on the gas instead of the electricity in the home of his niece, Mrs. William H. Watson, on Usher road, West Medford. A pulmotor at Lawrence General Hospital, Medford, was all that saved him. Early today, Mrs. Watson smelled gas and traced the odor to her uncle's room. He was unconscious.

When Mr. Beldoc was revived he said he remembered getting up in the night and trying to turn on the electric light. When it wouldn't light, he went back to bed never thinking he had turned on the gas.

B. & M. BUYS 26 GERMAN AND U. S. ENGINES

Management of the Boston & Maine Railroad announced today that within a few months the road will add to its fast freight service twenty-six locomotives, latest products of American and German manufacturers.

The road has arranged to have sent from the Fried Krupp Works at Essen, Germany, a trial locomotive—the first Diesel direct drive locomotive to be operated in the United States. Specifications are being prepared for bids on twenty-five heavy duty steam "full-jewelled" locomotives.

The locomotives, first bought by B. & M. in four years, will be used in the fast freight service between New Hampshire, Maine and Massachusetts points.

The Diesel-geared locomotive, which which burns oil, can be used for either freight, passenger or switching service. Unlike steam locomotives, according to the announcement, the Deisel-geared engine can be kept on the road almost constantly.

CRIMSON ASSAILS 'DRYS'

Harvard Paper Calls New Association an Intrigue for Wheeler

Terming the work of the Anti-Saloon League as "intrigue," and asking "Are professional agitators and faked figures to invade even the academic world for the benefit of Wayne B. Wheeler's pocketbook or the purses of his gang," the Harvard Crimson, today, in an editorial launched a protest against the invasion of college circles by prohibition leaders.

The attack is aimed directly at the latest off-shoot of the Anti-Saloon League, the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association. Its campaigns and plans for gathering statistics on the academic attitude toward prohibition are flayed in the editorial. The editorial is based specifically upon the appearance of one Lofton E. Wesley of the Intercollegiate Prohibition Association in Upsala College, New Jersey, recently.

"Dangling a Phi Beta Kappa key," the editorial comments, "he talked with students. He quoted figures to show that in 1916, 12.3 per million population died of liver trobule and while in 1921 only 7.4 per million were victims. He then demanded that a snap vote be taken. The results were slightly in favor of enforcement, it was said, and were entered in a notebook, Wesley moving on to a nearby college.

"Wesley is being sent to every college in New Jersey. Presumably the I. P. A. is making plans for similar campaigns in other states. The ways of the Anti-Saloon League and its subordinate organizations must be a never-ending delight to anyone interested in intrigue."

An Amazing Love Story of a Misunderstood Hub Working Girl

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Gay Moore and Christine Noe, her cousin, are employed in the State Street house of Johnstone Baird, Gay as a typist and Christine as telephone operator. Christine is in love with Roger Pennington and Gay is in love with Stanley Baird, Johnstone Baird's son. Christine runs around with Ivor Barclay in order to arouse Penny's jealousy. Stan's family disown him when he marries Gay. They happily start housekeeping. Stan obtains a position as an automobile mechanic. Christine marries Penny. They go to Europe for their honeymoon. Christine is jealous of Peggy Baird, Stan's sister, and Gay feels that Stanley has too much interest in Mimi Brooks, a girl of his own Back Bay set. Christine and Gay go to tea at a fashionable hotel, where they are met by Ivor Barclay. Stanley tells Gay that he has completed an invention which will mean they can move from their shabby apartment and have a real home. After midnight Penny telephones to ask Gay if she knows where Christine is. Gay does not tell him of meeting Barclay, but assures Penny that Christine must be all right. She asks him to come up and see them, and he promises.

CHAPTER 32.

Whatever they talked about—the office, his work, Gay and Stan—eventually they were speaking of the villa.

He realized it in a vague, puzzled way. Now Christine was saying that it was next to the Stowleys'—a young broker and his wife, leaders of "the crowd"; now she was telling how she had motored over with some of "the girls" and looked around the grounds; now she was quoting Bill Stowley—the villa was placed on the market through settling of an estate, dirt cheap it was at sixty thousand, bargain of a lifetime, really.

"If you have sixty thousand," Penny answered dryly. "Why doesn't Stowley buy it?"

"But he's holding off for us, darlingest. I told him I was pretty sure—well, you'd like it, wouldn't you? So gorgeous, Penny! a castle for a princess and you said—you did say you wanted me to have everything."

She had been sitting on his lap; now he put her down firmly, got up and began to pace back and forth.

"I can't seem to make you understand, Chris. Sixty thousand—why it would clean me. Bottom out of the market—probably couldn't raise sixty thousand if I sold everything I could get my hands on. Why—the whole thing—it's crazy!" He stopped still, staring at her; repeated "It's crazy!"

She gave him a long, tense look, began to shake all over, beating the chair with her fists. "Crazy!" she sobbed. "Because I want a home like other women have! You and your money—always crying hard up when I want something. Keep me stuck away in this awful place. Because you're too mean—oh, what's the use. I don't know why I ever married you!"

"But, Chris—" His voice broke through her hysteria. "I tell you it's out of the question. I'd go dead broke—we couldn't buy food! Besides—" he lighted a cigarette, unsteadily, "we'd not be any happier in a place like that.

"It isn't where you live—it's how you live. Look at Gay—what she's done was next to nothing. They're happier than if they had millions. Worked with her husband, she has, not against him. One can't pull the load alone.

"Won't you see, dear? You're not yourself; it's that crowd got hold of you, putting things in your head. I

SULLIVAN NOW PLANS TO SWIM IRISH CHANNEL

Long Beach, Cal., Feb. 2 (A.P.)—The Irish channel, a 65-mile swim from the English coast, is the next objective of Henry Sullivan, veteran swimmer who Monday became the second man and the first American to negotiate the Santa Catalina channel.

"I want to make a 48-hour swim and I think the Irish channel will do nicely," Sullivan said in explaining that, as he had conquered the English and Catalina channels, he was ready for a more difficult task.

Sullivan received a flood of congratulations on swimming the channel between Santa Catalina Island and the mainland. While the swimmer took 22 hours and 45 minutes to negotiate the course, for which George Young, 17-year-old Toronto, Ont., youth, won the $25,000 William Wrigley, Jr. prize, he blamed his longer time on adverse tides.

The tide battled by Sullivan was the highest of the year. At one time it carried him ten miles off his course in an 11-hour fight. At the close of the swim, however, it turned and, with its aid, Sullivan did the last six miles in three hours. He estimates that he covered 30 miles in crossing the channel of twenty odd miles.

PLYMOUTHS OLD AND NEW TALK ACROSS OCEAN

Plymouth, Feb. 2.—Hot, bubbling and succulent, a dish of Plymouth steamed clams—have you eaten yet?—was sent to old Plymouth, Eng., today from the newer Plymouth—but they were sent by radio telephone and in conversation.

The conversation was between William T. Eldridge, chairman of the Board of Selectmen of the American Plymouth, and James L. Palmer, editor of the Plymouth (Eng.) Western Morning News.

Greetings of old Plymouth were extended to new Plymouth, and then vice versa.

Editor Palmer sent personal greetings to the many friends he made in Plymouth on the Cape when he visited in 1915, the greetings being received personally for some of the intended recipients, as they were listening in on the long distance radi-phone chat, whose American end was in the selectmen's office in Town Hall.

"How would you like to have a dish of Plymouth steamed clams just now?" asked Chairman Eldridge of the Britisher.

"Fine!" I would enjoy nothing better," responded the editor.

"Consider them on the fire—I mean the wire," laughed Eldridge.

The voices were clear and little static was encountered.

BOY SAVES DAD FROM POISON DRAUGHT

Grieving for his missing daughter, Frances Aleczkiewicz, 15, Anthony Aleczkiewicz of Spring street, East Cambridge, was in the act of drinking poison when Patrolman John Mullally dashed in and knocked the phial from his lips.

He succeeded in swallowing some of the fluid, however, and was taken to the Cambridge City Hospital, where it was said he would recover.

"Father is going to kill himself," cried John Aleczkiewicz, 10-year-old son of the would-be suicide, to the police officer on duty in Spring street, near the home. The patrolman's fast sprint brought him to the scene in the nick of time.

Earlier in the day the father reported the absence of his daughter to the police at the East Cambridge station. She disappeared a week ago.

'PEACHES' SAYS 'DADDY' MADE HER WRITE ARDENT LOVE NOTES

PENNED LETTERS TO 'PRINCE CHARMING' UNDER THREATS

"Daddy's" typewriter, and she intimated that he had practically dictated the passionate epistles to himself.

Well, folks, it was pretty sticky up here in White Plains in the way of testimony as old "Daddy" Browning sat on the witness stand and prattled his tale of woe against the weighty young "Peaches," and they finally put the cover back on their matrial garbage can for a couple of weeks.

Both sides rested after "Daddy" had denied all, as the tabloid head line writers say, and after "Peaches" had also denied all once more, just for good measure, and Supreme Court Justice Seeger, who has been hearing the case, gave the attorneys two weeks in which to submit briefs in place of oral argument.

Poor Mr. Henry Epstein, the hash

NEEDS 'LITTLE AIR'

Judge Seegar promptly ordered a few windows opened while bailiffs hurried water to Mr. Epstein's succor. "Peaches" and her "maw," Mrs. Heenan, who were seated at Mr. Epstein's table, leaned forward solicituously.

Someone dashed out into the the crowded main street of White Plains, fighting his way through the packed corridors of the courthouse and returned with some spirits of ammonia. Mr. Epstein inconsiderately drank the Ammonnia instead of sprinkling it about the premises, and giving other unfortunates relief.

A five-minute recess was given Mr. Epstein by Judge Seeger, and everybody managed to revive more or less and continue listening to "Daddy."

The courtroom was packed to what you might call suffocation, and the women present seemed to stand it better than the men. In fact, they proved themselves gluttons for punishment, as the boys say. Some removed their modish helmets that they might not miss a word that fell from "Daddy's" pendant lips.

DADDY'S BIG DAY

At the conclusion of the hearing ful attorney who is representing "Peaches" was quite overcome during his cross-examination of "Daddy," probably by the fumes of "Daddy's" testimony. Mr. Epstein sat down very suddenly during the afternoon session while "Daddy" was fumbling with answers to questions. Mr. Epstein's face was quite white and his hands shook.

"Can't we have a little air, your honor?" he asked, plaintively, and everybody brightened up. All felt the need of a little air after listening to "Daddy."

Judge Seeger remarked that if he ever had another case like this he would hear it in private. He gently chided the newspaper reporters for adding comment to their reports, but I hope and trust that the court will not deem it comment if I say one little word to his statement that other cases of this kind will be heard in private. The word is amen.

But it was a big day for old "Daddy" Browning as he sat up there on the witness stand, with the wife of his bosom eyeing him now disdainfully, and now rather wistfully, but always eyeing him "Daddy's" maw-in-law also eyed him, using two eyes for the purpose.

"Daddy" kept his own eyes, which are rather glittering eyes, on other points of the compass. He scarcely ever glanced at the wife of his bosom, and her parent.

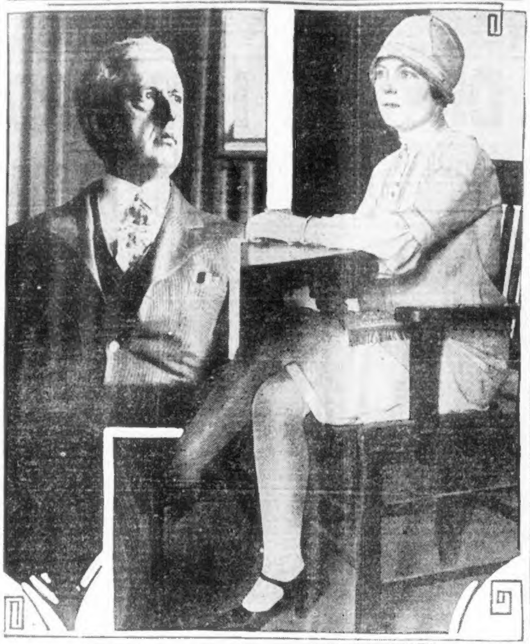
He wore a blue suit, and a high turn-down linen collar that seemed about to strangle him. He kept jerking his head forward to free his neck from the embrace of the collar like an old snapping turtle popping its beezer out of its shell.

"Daddy" had a reddish-purplish complexion peculiar to golfers, Scotch inhalers, though he took occasion to deny vehemently that he ever drank to any extent in the fifty-two years of his life. He said fifty-two. He looked older, what with the wattles on his jowls and his thin white hair.

He wore a very fancy neck-tie, with a diamond set in gold stuck in it. An inside pocket of his coat bulged with papers. Three fat cigars peeped out of the upper outside pocket of his coat, as usual. They must be "prop" cigars, or "Daddy" replaces them every day.

He kept his hands folded in his lap, twiddling the fingers from time to time as he pondered some question. Occasionally he would wrinkle up his forehead, and peer up at the ceiling as he thought over some interrogation.

YES, 'DADDY' HAD NO RUBBER EGGS



BROWNING AND ONE OF STAR WITNESSES

"Daddy" as he looked in court while telling story of his shattered romance with "Peaches." The witness is Mrs. Frank Farney, friend of the Brownings. She says "Daddy" was very nice to "Peaches." She didn't see him doling out rubber eggs, but knew he bought "Peaches" a gander. Her husband, however, says "Daddy" once did spring a collapsible spoon on him as joke. International Newsreel Photo

PHOTO 'STOLEN'

When he talked he talked so rapidly that the words fairly tumbled over each other. Once or twice under cross-examination he got quite excited and yelled his answers.

One occasion was when Mr. Epstein, in a most abashed manner, handed him a photograph and asked him if it was one that he had taken home to "Peaches," and said to be a photograph of Marion Dockerill. "Daddy" recoiled as the bailiff poked the picture at him, and bawled:

"No that's a filthy picture. I'd be ashamed to show it if I were you."

Your ever-blushing correspondent got a fleeting glimpse of the photo as it passed from hand to hand, and he violates no confidence in stating that it was, and doubtless still is, a photographic reproduction of a woman who seems to be posing with no drapes of any consequence about her person, not even as much as the proverbial fig leaf.

"But you weren't ashamed to show it to your wife?" queried Mr. Epstein.

"Yes, I was—maybe you showed it to her," roared "Daddy," his head jumping forward from his collar, like a man "shooting" his cuffs. "That's a filthy picture. I understand you stole it out of some place to frame me with."

TELLS SAD STORY

This statement was ordered stricken out by the court. Daddy fingered the picture very gingerly, but he refused to identify it as a likeness of Marion Dockerill.

As I gathered, Miss Dockerill is an exponent of some mysterious art of science known as numerology. "Daddy" said she gave both him and "Peaches" "readings," but "Peaches" didn't care for her's. Then Mr. Epstein handed him what purported to be a picture of Miss Dockerill taken from a newspaper and asked "Daddy" to compare this with the one he shrank from and say if they were of the same person.

"Daddy" handled the pictures as if he feared they might bite him, and finally remarked, somewhat cryptically

"Well, in one she seems to have a hat on."

There was some disappointment among the spectators that the original photo was not handed around more freely. It was no worse than some of the testimony, at that, though it might cause more of a sensation if hung in a hotel lobby.

"Daddy" hemmed and hawed no little with "Peaches'" attorney and had Mr. Epstein quite impatient at times. Also, Judge Seeger got a bit impatient with Mr. Epstein, and mildly rebuked the attorney for some of his questions to "Daddy." On direct examination at the hands of his own attorney, John E. Mack, "Daddy" answered with surprising swiftness.

It was when Mr. Epstein asked "Daddy" about "Peaches'" charges concerning his relations with Dorothy Sunshine Browning, his ten-year-old adopted daughter, that "Daddy" let out another yell.

"I think more of that child than I do of my life" he shouted.

He bellowed that he has never even heard of some of the other things that "Peaches" alleges against him. "Daddy" has quite a resounding voice when he puts all his lung-power behind it, though it was dropping to a low whisper at times during the cross-examination. He has what you might call a Brooklyn accent, saying "boid" for bird, and "poifect" for perfect.

His tale was mainly the sad, sad tale of what the Broadway boys term an "ap-say," meaning sap, trying to catch up with a little youth after he has passed that old fifty yard line. By the way, the roaring forties contributed a few listeners-in. They never heard anything like this down town.

They called him to the stand at 11:25. And "Daddy" for some reason did not move with elacrity. He got up from his chair very slowly, whispered a moment to Attorney Mack, then ambled to the witness chair. He somehow seemed very, very old as he hoisted his frame into the chair.

'PEACHES' SMILES

"Peaches" and Mrs. Heenan watched him very closely, and "Peaches'" face broke into a wide smile when "Daddy" testified that she had walked up to him when he was talking with some other girls at a dance at the McAlpin, was introduced to him, and asked him to dance with her.

"Daddy" rather gave the impression that "Peaches," then fifteen years old, pursued him hotly in those dear, dear days of some months ago, calling him up, and one thing and another. So they were married, as the movies say, and as you must know by this time.

That mysterious burning of "Peaches" by acid came into "Daddy's" discourse, but he could throw no light on it. He said the Heenans had little to eat, and their rent and radio installments were unpaid, and that he took care of all those little matters, besides giving "Peaches" $300 for clothes to enter the Spence, Central or Scutter Schools, all quite fashionable institutions.

Instead, he said, she had gone to Earl Carroll's theatre and got a job, not as a bath-tub exhibit, as you might suspect, but as an extra girl. This disappointed him no end, "Daddy" said. He told her it was no life for a girl. After the acid incident he paid Mrs. Heenan $50 per week to take care of "Peaches," and paid a Mrs. Mayer as a night nurse.

"Did you call at the Heenan's home until the Pizzaro incident?" asked Mr. Mack.

SO THEY MARRIED

Mr. Epstein objected to that question forthwith. There has been nothing said about Mr. Pizzaro? Who was Mr. Pizzaro? Well, it came out that Mr. Pizzaro had been hanging around the Heenans' home muttering about getting evidence to put "Peaches" in an institution.

So "Daddy" figured there was only one way out. "Peaches" would make him a good wife. So they were married, as I have said before. Then "Daddy" proceeded to a categorical denial of each and every incident of the nuptial night, and thereafter, alleged by "Peaches" as reflecting upon his character as a gentleman and scholar and causing her mental pain and anguish.

He took her everywhere, parties, dances, theatres. He spent his dough on her for clothes and jewelry, Russian sable and ermine coats. He called her up two or three times a day. He never hurled 'phone books at her, never slugged her, never set off an alarm clock in her ear, never crawled around on his hands and knees in her bed chamber and said "woof, woof," as "Peaches" alleges.

"I may have crawled around on my hands and knees when I was a baby, but never since," he said.

"You are not in your second childhood, then?" asked Mr. Mack.

"I hope not," replied "Daddy," but the vote in the courtroom might not have been unanimous.

ABOUT THE GANDER

Oh, yes, about the gander—the African honking gander that has been going kah-donking through the hearing. It seems that they were at a lawn party one day, at the home of some folks named Reeves, and they had the gander, and "Peaches" thought it would be just dandy to own the gander.

So, eager to grant her slightest wish, "Daddy" borrowed the gander and "Peaches" tied a ribbon around its neck, and down to Long Beach they went to parade the honker along the boardwalk, and have it photographed. That was that, "Daddy" said.

He never threatened to kill "Peaches" and her mother, and never got drunk. The sandpapering of his shoe trees mentioned by "Peaches" as one of the causes of her mental anguish, was nothing more than a little cobbling on one of "Peaches'" own shoes. It was tight, so he sandpapered it looser for her.

Incidentally, "Daddy" mentioned that he often wore "Peaches" tennis shoes and house slippers, and that she wore his, because they fit both ways, which statement caused some of the curious in the court to try to get a peek at "Peaches'" feet. Mr. Epstein learned from "Daddy" that he wears a number six shoe.

He said "Peaches" wanted an apartment on Park Avenue with "all corner rooms," which would have been a lot of corners in any man's town, and that furthermore she wanted six or seven rooms, because her mother was to live with her, and mother wanted two dogs while "Peaches" wanted three.

HOPED 'MA' WENT

"Did you have any idea that your wife or mother-in-law was going to leave you," asked Mr. Mack.

"Not my wife," replied "Daddy."

"And your mother-in-law.."

"Ie-er-ah-er—I was hoping so," replied "Daddy," and Mrs. Heenan laughed loudly.

"As the poet says, a hopeless hope," commented Mr. Mack.

This was about the only dig "Daddy" took at Mrs. Heenan, and he seemed ashamed of it, for he quickly added:

"I didn't mean that—I didn't mind her staying with us."

But he said under cross-examination that he was scarcely ever alone at any time with "Peaches," and that the marriage relation was never truly consummated. I believe that is the polite expression among us polite people.

A lot of those mysterious little letters that "Daddy" has been trying to get into the record were finally produced by Mr. Mack. They were notes written to Daddy by "Peaches" in his office when she would be waiting for him, and they were simple little epistles. In fact, they were so simple you might call 'em childish.

"PEACHES'" DENIALS

When Mr. Epstein brought "Peaches" back to the witness stand as one of his last witnesses, she said she had written these things at 'Daddy's" request.

"Sit down and write me a love letter," he would say, so she testified, and would stand beside her until she did. "Peaches" denied ever having seen the fellow James P. Nixon, whom she denounced as a liar when he claimed to be one of her former boy friends.

Also she denied the testimony of one Swint that she used baseball players' language. "Peaches" wore exactly the same outfit of blue dress and hat and sable coat that she started out with at Carmel, and her face showed signs of strain.

About the only allegation of "Peaches" that "Daddy" admitted was buying a dozen green handkerchiefs for a St. Patrick's day ball. "Peaches" said he had "hundreds" in his pocket, but "Daddy" defied anybody to get that many kerchiefs into one pocket.

QUIZZED ABOUT KISS

Mr. Epstein questioned him at great length as to his expenditures for living expenses, and brought out that "Daddy" pays about $800 a month for the famous hired Rolls-Royce and its crew of two, but the two work in his office when not escorting him.

He said he had spent between $10,000 and $12,000 on clothes and one thing and another for "Peaches," but didn't expect her to go through life as Mrs. Browning at that clip.

Mr. Epstein spent some time over the matter of "Daddy's" ownership of a pistol, and read at length from interviews and stories printed in newspapers purporting to quote "Daddy." He admitted some, and denied others.

"When was the first time you kissed your wife?" demanded Mr. Epstein.

"Daddy" puffed both checks full of wind, stared at the ceiling, and the crowd roared.

"Wife, or before she was my wife?" he countered.

Then he admitted that the first time he had committed osculation with "Peaches" was on a trip to Yonkers.

Mr. Epstein read him a denial by William H. Browning, president of the firm of Browning, King, & Co., that "Daddy's" father was ever connected with the firm, and "Daddy" in reply to that went prowling 'way back into the dim and mysterious past to establish a connection.

Oh, yes, about that Japanese princess that "Peaches" said "Daddy" told her he would buy her when she said she wanted children. "Daddy" said he couldn't seem to remember a thing about any Japanese princess, and as for "Peaches" wishing children—well.

NERVE SPECIALIST

And then the cross-examination went past the precincts of pure literature. In reply to a question if he had ever requested his wife to sit at the dinner table at Cold Spring in his presence quite nude, as "Peaches" asserted, "Daddy" said:

"Absolutely not. It was very cold. It would have been foolish to ask her."

As a final witness, Mr. Epstein recalled Dr. George A. Blakeslee, a neurological expert, who said he had much experience with pysconeurosis with the 82nd Division during the war, and asked him a hypothetical question several thousand words long.

The purport of the question was, would all the things set forth by "Peaches" against "Daddy" including the goose, rubber eggs, sandpapering, and all the rest, cause the nervous disorder to which "Peaches" is said to be prone. The doctor said he thought it would.

RESERVES DECISION

As both sides rested, Epstein moved the dismissal of the first cause of action by "Daddy," which is cruelty, but Judge Seeger said while he thought the motion should be granted, he would reserve decision until he heard the arguments, which the attorneys agreed should be in written form.

Mr. Mack thanked the court for his patience, to which Judge Seeger replied he had enjoyed it as much as one could be expected to enjoy such a case, rather leaving the impression that this isn't much enjoyment after all.

He said he had held the hearing in public only for fear he might have been misunderstood had he held it in private, with great wealth one one side. But he made it clear afterwards that if the lawyers have any more cases like this they desire heard in public they better forget his address.

'Peaches'' Lawyer, Near Collapse, Is Given Recess

White Plains, N. Y., Feb. 2.—During his cross-examination of "Daddy" Browning, Henry Epstein, counsel for "Peaches," suddenly sat down, his face quite white and his hands trembling.

"Can't we have a little air, Your Honor?" he asked Judge Seegar. The justice ordered several windows opened and granted the attorney a five-minute recess.

The recess was welcomed by all in the courtroom and at its conclusion Mr. Epstein resumed his questions.

CASCARETS

Cleans Inside, and Pores Free from Any Taint

All the trick laxatives in the world can't tempt people who understand the properties of cascara.

A hundred different drugs will purge the bowels, but a little natural cascara purifies the system clear through. Cleanses even the pores of your skin. Renders perspiration as inoffensive as so much dew!

Your grandparents took "salts," and slowly washed away the mucus membrane with the waste! Mineral oils are better, but they leave the coating that your blood must then carry off through the pores. But when you cascarize the system, you get rid of all the poisons by normal muscular action of the bowels.

Don't get in the habit of taking medicine for constipation—or even for auto-intoxication. If you have the habit, stop it. A candy cascaret is a delightful form in which to take cascara; children love them and the taste tempts most grown-ups to take "more." And what a comfort to know you are in that clean, wholesome condition that does away with any need or deodorants, even in warmest weather! Try a cascaret tonight! All druggists, 10c and 25c.

TY COBB USES MAGIC LINIMENT KEEPS FREE OF ACHES AND PAINS

If Reader Feels Stiff, Lame, Rheumatic, Here Is a Tip From "Ty"

LINIMENT KEEPS YOU LIMBER, SPRY, SUPPLE

Men and women who suffer with lame, stiff, achy backs, joints or muscles, and would like to be free of [illegible] should take a tip from Big League Stars like Ty Cobb.

Ty Cobb says: "A bad injury to my leg which I thought would prevent me playing [illegible] for a long time was quickly relieved by using Mike Martin's Liniment. I attribute my complete and quick recovery to Mike's Liniment and recommend it highly."

Big League Stars couldn't play ball if crippled up with aches, pains, swollen, stiff joints or rheumatism. Whenever they get that way no time is lost in quicker relieving the trouble. Mike Martin's Liniment is a higher priced, more expensive liniment than ordinary remedies, but it is worth the difference—quicker, sure, safer and better—more pleasant to use also. It is unquestionably the best money can buy. High priced 'Stars' wouldn't fool with anything but the best.

With each bottle of Mike Martin's Liniment you buy at the drug store comes a folder telling just how it is fine in treating various aches, pains, joints and different rheumatic troubles, lame back, etc. Twenty-five years' experience makes him probably the world's greatest expert on such troubles. Take Ty Cobb's tip. Get a bottle at drug store, or write name and address plainly and send with a dollar bill for large bottle, postage paid to Mike Martin, Trainer Washington Ball Club, Brentwood, Md.

Just Dumb Kid

FANS ALL WANT O'CONNELL PARDONED

LETTERS that come in to newspapers usually are loaded with nails. They pan this, that and the other thing. The constant reader likes to take his pen in hand and pan the wise cracks of the poor scrivener. That gets to be part of the racket, after a while. The epistles fall in the waste basket, with a casual "ho hum."

Nick Flatley

Some few days ago we wrote a paragraph or so about Jimmy O'Connell, the young Giant player who was fired out of baseball for being mixed up in a petty scandal three years ago. We set it down as our opinion that the kid should be reinstated. This was a reflection following the whitewashing of Cobb and Speaker and sundry other athletes.

One mail the next day brought in ten letters. Each and every one endorsed the idea and claimed that it was time someone took up the cudgels. The fan sentiment is stronger for Jimmy, apparently, than it was for Ty and Tris, and the rest.

The old-timers had made their pile. They could retire and have plenty of fun. O'Connell was chased when he hadn't started. He had the brightest future that ever stretched in front of a kid ball player. He was turned into a "bum" overnight. Sounds harsh, but it's the plain and simple truth.

Baseball kicked Jimmy out, and then kept on his neck when he tried to stagger along back home. He left the coast in a blaze of glory and came back a so-called "criminal." All over a matter of $500.

Baseball scandals have been aired and dry-cleaned this Winter, but it would seem that the gang will not be satisfied until poor Jimmy gets a bit of the generosity that was spread over more important victims of charges.

MAKES A LOT OF DIFFERENCE WHO TRIES TO DIVE INTO THE WHITEWASH BUCKET.

And isn't there something or other about the sinner who sincerely repents? Jimmy was more than sorry when he found out what it was all about.

SENTENCE NOT PROPORTIONATE TO CRIME

HERE are two pictures. A kid, just old enough to vote, bought for $100,000 highest price ever paid for an outfielder prospect. Feted and toasted.

And, the same kid, two years later, a laughing stock. Booed and jeered. Fired out of a tincan bush league, where he was just trying to earn his eats.

Baseball fans are sentimental, if the game has gone away from that sort of thing. The following excerpts from two letters tell you that:

"I'll take a moment of your time," writes Harry Richmond of Middleboro, "to tell you that I think it's great sportmanship on your part to [illegible] that article about Jimmy O'Connell. Hope you'll come again with more like it. Yours for a fair show."

"Your viewpoint," says F. A. Gage of Swampscott, "on the O'Connell matter, has my whole-hearted approbation. I am only one of hundreds of thousands of fans who would like to see the lad get a chance.

"A misguided youngster should get a punishment commensurate with his crime. Banishment for life is like giving a fellow twenty years for playing poker on Sunday. I hope that you and other sporting writers keep this matter before the baseball authorities. It's all wrong. Yours for sport. —"

IF it were left to a fan vote, poor Jimmy would be exonerated without a dissenting voice. If enough fans yell, perhaps he will be. We're here to announce that we'd be glad to help.

CHAPTER IX

IT WAS Margret who brought Honey Lou the first news of Jack that she had, after she left him.

"He's gone out of town on a business trip," she said to her the night after Honey Lou came home to her mother's house. "I imagine he's [illegible] to sell [illegible] be on the road for the factory as salesman, you know."

"Yes, I know," Honey Lou answered faintly. . . . She was thinking of railroad wrecks, and hotel fires . . . and her Jack in them [illegible] any woman who loves a man worries over him the way she might worry over her child.

"We need a few good salesmen [illegible]," Margret went on. "[illegible] I don't see why the factory don't shut down. We have hardly any orders coming in at all."

"That's because of the Summer slump," Honey Lou answered her with her head on one side like a wise sparrow. "Business always picks up toward the end of September."

"Well, it will have to pick up awfully fast down at the factory, that's all," her sister observed dryly. "Grumpy has such old-fashioned notions . . . he doesn't believe in advertising, and he won't let Jack tell him anything. Please pass the potatoes, Honey Lou."

The three women were at supper together.

Honey Lou looked at it with [illegible] eyes. The cloth was like satin from careful laundering. The old silver shone and the glassware sparkled like diamonds. There were late marigolds in a little yellow bowl in the centre of the cloth.

"Mother, you're a marvelous housekeeper," she said. "I don't know how you and Margret manage to live as beautifully on next to nothing."

"Honey Lou," Mrs. Huntley answered quietly. "Your grandmother could make angel food that would melt in your mouth, and when she darned a sock it looked like fine embroidery—You're probably a wonderful housekeeper yourself if you only had a chance to prove it."

"All the women in our family have been wonderful housekeepers."

Honey Lou sighed, thinking of the housework she had planned to do for Jack's comfort and contentment when they were first married. . . . She remembered their honeymoon when he wouldn't even let her fry the fish for breakfast.

"Oh, well," she said, looking down at her plate. "I don't know about that — I reckon all I'm good for is drumming the keys of a typewriter. [illegible] have to start drumming one too pretty soon if Jack doesn't get home and give me some money."

At the end of the week he was still out of town, and Honey Lou made up her mind to go to see Grumpy and borrow some money from him. . . . She simply had to have some money to give her mother for her board. And anyway, there were a couple of things she wanted to talk over with Grumpy. He had always been a mighty good friend of hers.

She went down to see him on Monday afternoon, without telling [illegible] that she was going [illegible] she found him all alone in [illegible] sound asleep at his big [illegible] desk.

She shook him gently by his shoulder and he roused and cocked one of his little eyes [illegible].

"[illegible]," he exclaimed in his gruff old voice, and sat up. [illegible] sit down [illegible] — [illegible] and [illegible]"

"[illegible]" "[illegible] — and money," she said with her little grin [illegible] her eyes at him. "I [illegible] a penny, Grumpy. I had to walk all the way down to the [illegible]—I [illegible] from [illegible]"

Grumpy [illegible] his mane of gray hair.

"What's all this trouble about, anyway?" he asked. "Jack [illegible] and Angie have been [illegible] about [illegible] a couple of [illegible] never listen to women. They don't know how to tell the truth."

"I'll tell [illegible] I can," Honey Lou [illegible] and she did tell [illegible] the little feet from one corner of his desk.

"Now, what would you do in a case like that, Grumpy?" she asked him when she had come to the end.

Grumpy picked up his pen and wrote her a check for a hundred dollars. He [illegible] it across the [illegible]

"[illegible] and wait to see [illegible]"

He [illegible] at her with his [illegible] I tell you one [illegible] Didn't I tell you you'd go crazy if you did?—You're too [illegible] that's what's the matter with you, Honey Lou."

He pushed back his chair from the desk and [illegible] thumbs into [illegible] "Now I suppose Angie has [illegible] a purpose. Ever since she was a little girl she's followed Jack around like his shadow. Jack's [illegible] and I could never figure out why she and Jack didn't hit it off years ago—but they didn't."

His voice sounded tired and Honey Lou left him. On her way out she looked at some paper that was lying on the desk that had once belonged to Ann Ludlow. The letterheads that lay there were not nearly so fine as the old ones a year ago. . . . Evidently money was scarce at the Warwick factory.

"Jack's back in town," Margret told her the next night when she came home at six o'clock. "I saw him and your friend, Angela, [illegible] night. She called for him in her car and took both him and Grumpy home."

"I don't care," Honey Lou answered, although she did of course.

"Grumpy was pretty sick all the afternoon," Margret added, fluffing up her straight dark hair with her fingers. "He falls asleep all the time, at his work. Really it worries me."

The next morning Grumpy sent for Honey Lou to come to him—not to his office, but to his house.

Household Hints

Tar stains can be removed by rubbing gently with benzine.

Potatoes will cook more quickly if they are left to stand in hot water for about a quarter of an hour before being baked in the oven.

To prevent moths getting into carpets go over the latter once a week with a broom dipped in hot water to which a little turpentine has been added.

Do not let soup boil, but allow it to simmer slowly. Much of the liquid is wasted in evaporation and the best of the flavor is lost if the soup boils or is heated too quickly.

Rub warts night and morning with castor oil. In time they will [illegible] and disappear.

To clean a bottle that has contained oil fill it with fine [illegible] in cold water, and bring [illegible] to boiling point. Keep [illegible] for an hour, and then allow to [illegible] cool in the water. Empty out the [illegible] wash in warm, soapy water and rinse in cold.

She sank down calmer now, weeping with self-pity.

"You're making a mountain out of nothing, [illegible]," He ventured that, rather wearily. They had quarreled before, no less violently. Tomorrow, perhaps, they would make up again—go round and round the same old circle.

THOUSANDS OF MEN AND WOMEN WILL NEVER GROW GRAY OR OLD-LOOKING

As Long as Color Glands Remain Normal and Active Plenty of Pigment Will Keep Hair Its Natural Shade

IF HAIR IS FADED AND STREAKED WITH GRAY BEGIN REVIVING COLOR GLANDS

Simple Tonic Starts Youthful Color Returning Again

Everybody knows if their color glands and hair roots are active and normal they will continue indefinitely to have rich, natural colored hair entirely free of gray and off-colored locks.

A doctor several years ago asked himself this question: "Why not rub a stimulating tonic into the scalp that will revive, strengthen and tone up those inactive glands so that nature in her own inimitable way will resume putting plenty of pigment into the hair tubes—surely the hair will then again resume its original, natural, beautiful shades of youth regardless of the users' age or the condition of their hair."

REMARKABLE DISCOVERY

The doctor's search for a tonic that would accomplish this purpose led him into endless experiments, but the final result was worth it. He didn't want a dye or tint and it, of course, must be harmless and something that could be used for years and years without the slightest injury to hair or scalp.

Under the name of Lea's Hair Tonic anyone may now purchase the tonic he finally perfected. For several years now hairdressers and people scattered all over the country have been using it. Results are so natural, gradual and nice that men as well as women use it.

It doesn't stain the scalp. One's friends seldom notice the gradual change and to test what it will do one needs only to apply it a week or so to some small spot and watch results.

Users have been amazed at the younger appearance that comes with the disappearance of gray hairs from their head. If any reader desires to try a bottle of Lea's Hair Tonic on the maker's absolute guarantee of complete satisfaction they should pin a dollar bill to this advertisement and send it to Lea's Tonic Company, Brentwood, Md., with their name and address plainly written. A generous sized bottle will be sent prepaid anywhere. Leading druggists have Lea's Hair Tonic, $1.00 per bottle.

Women's New Hygiene

Ends disposal problem—Discards like tissue

By ELLEN J. BUCKLAND
Registered Nurse

THE old time sanitary pad has been supplanted by a new and better way called KOTEX.

✓ It ends the embarrassment of laundry and disposal. You discard Kotex as easily as tissue.

It's five times as absorbent as ordinary cotton pads, and thus protects amazingly. You wear sheer gowns and gay frocks under the most trying conditions.

Also deodorizes, and thus ends all fear of offending. 8 in 10 better class women now use it. Great hospitals employ it. Doctors widely urge it.

Most stores have Kotex on counters wrapped in plain paper, ready to be picked up without even asking.

Costs only a few cents for a package of 12. Be sure you get the genuine KOTEX, for only Kotex itself is "like" Kotex.

DOCTOR GAVE HER MIXTURE TO STOP COUGHING SPELLS

Coughed So Bad People Stared — Began to Worry Family

HAWKED AND SPIT UP PHLEGM EACH MORNING

"A person with a bad cough is a fool not to see their doctor right away," declares Mrs. D. R. Shedwell. "I coughed in church, in the office where I work and at the movies so bad people would stare at me. Mornings I was a nuisance around the house, coughing up phlegm and mucus. At night I breathed through my mouth and morning my mouth was dry and tasted awful.

SAW HER DOCTOR

"Our [illegible] doctor met me on the street and noticed I coughed every minute or so. [illegible] no good and I couldn't take cod liver oil. He laughed and wrote down the name Linonine and told me it was a [illegible] mixture with [illegible] far better than Cod Liver Oil and quicker, too.

WONDERFUL RESULTS

"Only the biggest downtown stores had Linonine but it's worth going miles to get. My cough loosened up and vanished almost like magic. Since then a dozen friends who were wheezing and coughing around have taken Linonine and even the kids in the neighborhood like to take it when they get a cough or cold. It builds you up, too."

A cough is a nasty, annoying thing to have and dangerous too this time of year. A 50c or $1.00 bottle at home does the work. Well stocked druggists have Linonine made by the nationally known Kerr Chemical Co., or send dollar bill with name and address to Kerr Chemical Co., Brentwood, Md., for large bottle postage free to your home.

THE PUBLIC GOOD

By Eudora R. Richardson

T[illegible] asked with [illegible] ght of day [illegible] ephant, old [illegible] the House from [illegible] I want to [illegible] Ways and Means [illegible] he commanded the sergeant [illegible]

When the Senator arrived [illegible] was amazed at the extreme [illegible] Not a day [illegible] he must be—slim and straight, with the lean, clear-cut features and thoughtful eye of a student.

"You sent for me?" he asked.

John Tennant massaged his chin reflectively. "It's about that bill o' yours," he explained. "My folks don't want any redistribution o' funds accruin' from the two cents gasoline tax."

"The present plan, based on wealth and not on the number of automobiles is unfair," Wills explained. "Simpson is a mountainous county with only about fifty automobiles, but your pulp mills [illegible] according to the amount o' gas bought, which is little and [illegible]

"But the good of the state," the [illegible] then the state," John Tennant answered defiantly.

Senator Wills' eyes widened [illegible]

[illegible] drop it," the [illegible]

[illegible] to be expected the second Senator also arrived promptly. It was a shy little man with a placat[illegible]

"Wills' bill robs Simpson of nearly all her road building money," John Tennant announced [illegible]

"Simpson's getting now about ten times as much as she puts in, isn't she?" asked the senator.

"I ain't here to argue," Tennant snapped. "I'm representin' the people. Simpson's about a fifth o' your district."

Tennant was pleased to see that the argument went home.

"Only way to defeat that bill is to keep it from comin' up till the last minute. We'll have to get the hearin' postponed once or twice [illegible]

Old John watched two weeks pass with satisfactory delays in the [illegible] of Senate Bill 350. At length the hearing could be postponed no longer. Tennant had kept down the publicity so that his cronies in the Assembly were able to maintain neutrality. The committee room [illegible] of proponents and a total absence of those opposed.

Old John counted much upon the inexperience of the young Senator. The old man waddled in a little late, in time, however, to hear Wills' exposition of the bill. His figures were convincing. Simpson and two or three other counties had paved roads out of all proportion to their taxes, due to their scarcity of automobiles and small purchase of gasoline. The proposed distribution, according to the number of automobiles and not according to wealth, was manifestly fairer.

John Tennant could see that the committee was impressed. There was nothing that even his friends could do but report the bill out. It appeared next day on the State calendar and was forthwith introduced in the House.

[illegible] that night Tennant went to Foster's room.

"[illegible] Senate and the House both [illegible] on the objection rule now oughtn't to be much trouble keepin' 350 from comin' to a vote," he said [illegible] feet on the bureau.

"No," the Senator promised. "I can get my five to object."

For the next two weeks old John Tennant's task of watchdog was not an unpleasant one. On the afternoon of the last day five objectors in the House doggedly delayed the vote on 350. It was accordingly late that night that the bill came to its last reading by the [illegible] process of elimination. John Tennant glanced over the sea of tired faces about him. Members would reinstate duelling or make lynching legal for the sake of a little sleep.

"Mr. Speaker," John Tennant called. "I propose the following clause as amendment to the bill: 'Distribution shall be according to the wealth of counties and according to the number of automobiles.'"

Two or three younger men spoke against the amendment. Then Tennant oozed out of his chair once more.

"I'm for the common people," he bellowed. "Autocrats, plutocrats—that's what's ruinin' this country. A few people make up the wealth o' Simpson. The rest are poor people. The present plan o' distribution helps us to live. But I'm ready for compromise. Let the distribution be in proportion to wealth and the number o' automobiles. That's fair."

Men yawned at their desks. It was no time for weary minds to see that John Tennant had uttered nonsense.

The bill was passed as amended. A messenger was sent to the Senate, old John in his wake. From a vantage point beneath the gallery John could see the expression on Wills' face as the messenger announced, "The House has passed Senate Bill No. 350 and asks concurrence." Wills first looked pleased, then doubtful and asked to have the amendment read. Senator Foster came to the back of the room where Tennant stood.

"How did you get it through with that absurd amendment?" he asked.

"By makin' a poor man's speech," John replied. "Do anything the last night."

"You can't average unlike things," Foster continued.

"I know, but adjournment is 30 minutes off. Watch Wills."

The young Senator was speaking deliberately, doubt[illegible]

"He's filibusterin' because he can't think o' anything else to do," Tennant said.

"The bill could be passed yet without the amendment and then be sent back to the House," Foster [illegible]

"Time's short," Tennant countered. "Wills is new."

Minute by minute dragged by and still the Senator spoke. At length the gavel fell. Bills that had been killed or had died on the calendar littered the floor. The [illegible] session of the General Assembly was declared at an end. Wills, mopping his brow, took his seat. He looked weary. [illegible] Old John Tennant advanced to his side.

"You've killed your own bill," the Representative smiled.

"Killed by tricksters," the young man answered. "Next time I'll know how."

"Next time it's likely you won't be here," prophesied the veteran. "The people don't send us back unless we look after 'em. We [illegible] young ones every year, but a few of us stay on forever."

John Tennant's face wrinkled into a smile. The next day he would return to tell his constituents that he had taken care of them.

PINEX for Coughs

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE---BY HELEN ROWLAND

"THAT married feeling," that wifely possession, is one of the strongest ties on earth, in spite of all the modern cynics and scoffers at matrimony.

• • •

It will hold a woman to a man after she has lost her hold on his heart, and even years after the last little flicker of sentiment for him has sputtered out in her own soul.

• • •

Somehow, there is always a certain satisfaction in being still the official, recognized custodian of his clothes, guardian of his digestion and steward of his personal possessions.

• • •

There is always, to a woman, a certain comfort in having a man's shoes in the closet, even when she can no longer control his wandering FEET.

And a certain solace in seeing his cravats hanging beside the chiffonier even though they may have been selected to please other women.

• • •

A certain pleasure in hanging his dinner clothes in the spare-room cupboard even though he may wear them only to impress the multitude; and a certain satisfaction in putting away his golf knickers, even when they remind her only of lonesome Saturday afternoons or quarrelsome twosomes.

• • •

A certain pride in folding away his monogrammed shirts, even though she is no longer sure WHOSE head is resting against their bosoms—and a certain triumph in gathering up his pipes and smoking things, even though she suspects that his "pipe dreams" are no longer of her.

A certain satisfaction in keeping his military brushes cleaned and polished and his razor high and dry on the bath room shelf, even though she knows that he no longer grooms, shaves and beautifies himself in order to please HER.

• • •

And a certain triumph in seeing his hat on the newel-post or the hall rack, even though she is aware that it is but a temporary abiding place until he can find an excuse to don it and GET OUT!

• • •

Oh yes, there is a vast, strong possessive triumph which every wife feels sub-consciously, in seeing around her the indisputable evidence of her legal dynastic rights over some man!

• • •

This is the tie that often binds a woman to a man, long after the spirit of the contract has been broken and only the FORMULA remains. It is the atavistic instinct that causes her to go right on clinging, long after her "sturdy oak" has turned out to be only a wavering willow.

In marriage, POSSESSION is ninety-nine points of the law—and the hundredth point is habit!

Embarrassing Position Experienced By Bronx Lady

Miss Jeanne Ginsberg, Bronx, N. Y., writes: "I had become accustomed to arising each day with a heavy head, dizzy and bad taste in my mouth. My bowels were frequently clogged and constipated. One day I became so sick to my stomach I had to leave an important job and go home. A friend advised me to take CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS. COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the infected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist.

"California Fig Syrup" can't harm tender stomach, bowels

Every mother realizes, after giving her children "California Fig Syrup," that this is their ideal laxative, because they love its pleasant taste and it thoroughly cleanses the tender little stomach, liver and bowels without griping.

Principal and interest payable in United States gold coin of the present standard of weight and fineness, in New York City at the principal office of Dillon, Read & Co., without deduction for any Bolivian taxes, present or future. Redeemable as a whole, or in part by lot, at 102½ and interest, on any interest payment date on 30 days' notice. Central Union Trust Company of New York, Countersigning Agent.

An accumulative sinking fund is provided for, beginning October 1927, calculated to redeem all the bonds by maturity, which will be used to purchase bonds up to 102½ and interest or, if not so obtainable, to call bonds by lot, semi-annually, at 102½ and interest.

The following information has been furnished us by His Excellency, Zacarias Benavides, Minister of Finance of the Republic of Bolivia:

THE ISSUE

The bonds will be the direct obligation of the Republic of Bolivia, and will be issued under authority of the Laws of November 18, 1925, March 31, 1926, December 24, 1926 and January 5, 1927. In addition, the Government has agreed that it will pledge, by a first or a second charge, certain revenues to secure payment of interest, amortization and principal, and that the proceeds of such revenues available for the service of the bonds shall be maintained at not less than one and one-half times the amount required for such service. Included in the revenues upon which the service of the bonds will constitute a first charge are the newly created royalties of the Government from the exploitation of the oil lands in the Department of Chuquisaca, in which Department important oil properties have been located.

The Republic proposes to employ the proceeds of the bonds to commence the construction of a railroad from Cochabamba to Santa Cruz, to carry on the construction of the Potosi-Sucre railway, and for other purposes.

ECONOMIC CONDITIONS

The Republic of Bolivia, situated in the central-western portion of South America, has an area of approximately 514,400 square miles, and a population of approximately 2,800,000. The Republic was founded in 1825, the present constitution having been adopted in 1880. Bolivia's wealth is now derived principally from the production of tin, silver, antimony, tungsten, bismuth and rubber. Approximately one quarter of the world's tin is produced in Bolivia, the country being second only to the Malay Peninsula as a source of supply. Extensive oil fields have been located in the Department of Chuquisaca, and foreign capital is now being invested in their development. In these activities American oil interests have a predominant position. Bolivia's exports have exceeded imports in each year except 1921 of the ten-year period ended December 31, 1925. Figures for the first nine months of 1926 show a like excess.

FINANCES

The Bolivian Government has met all obligations appertaining to the public debt incurred during the last half century. The total national debt of Bolivia on December 31, 1926 was approximately $43,700,000 or less than $16.00 per capita (excluding this issue). This debt has been incurred principally for the construction of railroads and other public works. Revenues of the government have exceeded expenditures, other than capital expenditures, in each of the past three years. Bolivian currency is based on the gold standard, the notes of the Banco de la Nacion Boliviana having a gold cover in excess of 40%.

(Conversions of Bolivian currency into United States currency have been made at 33 1/3 cents to the Boliviano, approximately the present rate of exchange, parity being 38.93 cents to the Boliviano.)

The Republic of Bolivia has agreed to make application to list these bonds on the New York Stock Exchange

Statements above are in no event to be construed as representations by us and have been received by us partly by cable

We offer these bonds for delivery if, when and as issued and accepted by us, subject to the approval of all legal matters by our counsel Messrs. Root, Clark, Howland & Ballantine, and Messrs. Many Corporations Raise Their Dividend Payments

By B. C. Forbes

NEW YORK, Feb. 2.—Those who fix the amount of money to be distributed to stockholders are taking a cheerful view of conditions and prospects, the records kept by this column clearly show.

B. C. Forbes

During January no fewer than eighty-nine boards of directors made shareholders happy by declaring improved dividend rates.

Curiously, exactly the same number of industrial and public utility companies took favorable action last month and in January of last year. Last month four railroads took favorable dividend action as compared with only two a year ago.

The industrial companies raising their payments last month numbered seventy-five, the utility companies ten.

* * *

EXTRA DIVIDENDS were declared by no fewer than 31 industrial companies while 18 increased their rates, 11 declared stock dividends, 2 made initial disbursements, 7 paid back dividends and 4 resumed distributions.

Among the public utilities there were 4 newcomers in the dividend ranks, 3 increased their rates, 2 declared extra dividends and 1 announced a stock dividend. Two railroads improved their rate, 1 paid an extra and 1 a stock dividend.

Among the better known industrial concerns that announced extra dividends last month were:

Name of Company	Extra Rate
Homestake Mining Co.	$1
Alaska Packers Assn.	$2
Pittsburgh Plate Glass Co.	5%
Union Oil Company	2%
Liggett & Myers Tob. Co.	4%
Harbison-Walker Refract.	2%
Intertype Corp.	25c
Savannah Sugar	25c
Gillette Safety Razor Co.	12½c
N. Y. & Hondur. Ros. Min. Co.	2½%
Cushman's Sons, Inc.	$3
Great Lakes Dredge & Dock Co.	2%
National Refining Co.	2%
Sherwin-Williams Co.	1%
Cumberland Pipe Line Co.	$3
Hart, Schaffner & Marx	2%
Imperial Oil Co.	12½%
Lehigh Coal & Nav. Co.	½ of 1%
Pure Oil Co.	12½c

* * *

SOME OF the stock dividends declared were very generous—there was one of 400 per cent. The list follows:

Name of Company	Stock Dividend Per Cent.
Brockway Motor Truck Corp.	2.
Burroughs Add. Machine	33 1-3.
Childs Company	4.0
Consol. Laundries Corp.	1.
Consol. Paper Co.	80.
Eureka Vacuum Cleaner Co.	40.
Federal Motor Truck Co.	2½.
Island Creek Coal Co.	400.0
Liggett & Myers Tob. Co.	10.0
Reynolds Tob. Co. N. B.	25.
Texas Corp.	10.

The example set by the U. S. Steel Corporation, in announcing a 40 per cent. stock dividend, is likely to be followed by many other enterprises. Every now and then the financial world has rumors that Washington is casting envious eyes upon enormous corporate surpluses and that legislation may be passed to tax all surpluses above the amount the lawmakers may adjudge to be reasonable for the requirements of the business. In the past the courts usually have been responsive to suits brought by stockholders against companies that have piled up gigantic surpluses, the legal view taken being that stockholders are entitled to the distribution of all earnings above those necessary for the safe carrying on of the business and rational provision for possible emergencies.

* * *

THE FOLLOWING TABLE gives comparisons since the end of 1923 of all extra or increased or initial or stock or back or resumed dividend payments month by month:

	1927	1926	1925	1924
January	89	87	69	78
February		72	64	49
March		102	81	67
April		80	84	45
May		56	42	89
June		96	67	41
July		64	38	21
August		67	80	23
September		85	82	48
October		69	84	37
November		103	98	63
December		184	147	104
	89	1,025	821	621

* * *

ALL DIVIDEND action taken last month by directors was not favorable. Seven industrial companies suspended payments, two deferred payments and three reduced their rates, while one utility corporation deferred its payment and another ordered a reduction; one railway dividend was omitted.

But against the 16 companies taking unfavorable action, 89, as already stated, took favorable action.

Nothing depressing about this record, is there?

TEXAS GULF SULPHUR EARNINGS TAKE JUMP

Texas Gulf Sulphur Company for 1926 reports net of $9,383,813, after expenses, Federal taxes, etc., equivalent to $3.69 a share on 2,540,000 no par shares, against $6,683,241, or $2.24 a share, figured on same basis in 1925.

Gleasonite Pays

At directors' meeting of the Gleasonite Products Company of Brockton, Mass., the fourteenth successive quarterly dividend of 2½ per cent. was declared, payable March 10 to stockholders of record of February 25.

NO MONEY FOR CAPE CANAL

Despite the fact that purchase by the government of the Cape Cod Canal was authorized January 21, preliminary steps only can be taken at this time to effect transfer of the waterway to the United States, as the act authorizing the purchase made no appropriation. If the usual procedure is followed, it is probable that funds will not become available until about July 1, 1928.

When the canal is formally transferred to the United States it will become a free navigable waterway to United States ships and no tolls for passage through it will be charged.

The War Department has not as yet approved any plans for further improvement of the canal when it secures title to the waterway. In 1922, however, Colonel Edward Burr, district engineer first New York district, made a study of the canal and reached certain conclusions as to the work which should be done if the Federal government acquired the property.

Cost of improving the canal with his recommendations, provided the canal were closed to navigation during construction, amounted to $11,350,000 if the canal remain an open one and $13,850,000 if improvements include placing of locks in the canal. If the canal were to remain open during improvements recommended, costs would be $13,700,000 for an open canal and $16,850,000 for a canal with locks.

Present annual cost of operating the canal is approximately $300,000. Costs under improvements suggested were given as $230,000 provided locks are placed in the canal and $162,700 without locks. The report has not yet been approved by the War Department and the plans finally adopted may vary considerably from these outlined in Colonel Burr's report.

NEW ENGLAND TEXTILES ARE UNLISTED

By FRANK H. MELOON, Financial Editor.

Talking with officials of the Boston Stock Exchange at the Algonquin Club more than three years ago, I urged that larger listings be at once obtained. We discussed listing of the New England textiles, especially those at Fall River and New Bedford. In the trade depression that followed for these mills it was hardly possible to arouse interest in listing.

* * *

One member of the Boston Stock Exchange has for years published daily quotations on Fall River and New Bedford mill issues. Other brokers, not members, have put out similar lists from time to time. New England textiles, therefore, while "unlisted" in the sense that they have not been listed on the Boston or New York Stock Exchanges, have actually been "listed" in a popular sense for a long time.

* * *

There has been some doubt expressed as to whether the time is now opportune for listing the battered textile group in Boston. The two examples of listed New England textiles, American Woolen and Pacific Mills, offer no particular encouragement to the advocates of present-day listing. There is no evident reason to suppose the stocks of these companies are bringing better prices or obtaining speedier markets when offered than they would obtain "over the counter," as they call unlisted trading.

* * *

Industrial picture of New England textile plants in other than A-1 condition has some false points, to say the least. Note that Edwin Farnham Greene, treasurer of Pacific Mills, says of that concern: "Plants have been kept in first class condition and some improvements have been made at a cost of $690,000." Here is a plant well equipped and ready to take advantage of any turn for the better in its textile field.

In the face of gloomy forecasts by others, we expressed the belief in this column a year ago that building for 1926 would set a new record. It did. The same gloomy forecasts were again forthcoming at the outset of the current year, and again the opinion was here expressed that the dark picture was being overdrawn.

* * *

Now comes good building news. Associated General Contractors of America, at their annual meeting, were told that "the volume of construction operations in the United States promises to equal the record-breaking activities of last year."

* * *

The forecast by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, F. W. Dodge & Company, Cooper and Brass Research Association and Building Age, collaborating, says 1927 building operations will involve expenditure of $9,000,000,000. New buildings will approximate $4,000,000,000, repairs and maintenance more than $4,000,000,000 and fire and storm losses more than $500,000,000.

* * *

Alexander Hamilton Business Institute Weekly declares the actual amount of money spent on building in 1926 amounted to about $8,725,000,000, as compared with $8,250,000,000 in 1925, an increase of nearly 6 per cent.

* * *

Former Gov. Percival P. Baxter of Maine says: "In the (water-power) fight now raging in Augusta new and powerful influences have entered the field. Insull interests of Chicago gradually have bought up many of public utilities of Maine, almost all except Bangor. These interests own openly Cumberland County Power, Central Maine and Western Maine Power companies. Senator Gould's system in Aroostook has been sold and Insulls, I am informed, already have tried to purchase Rumford Falls and Bangor companies. They seek to own everything in Maine as they practically now do in New Hampshire and Vermont. Through triumvirate of public utilities, banks and newspapers, they propose to take power out of Maine and use it wherever they will. I predict next move is to buy Maine Central Railroad."

X-RAY

Examination, consultation, trial treatment and medicine absolutely free to all who call before Feb. 6th. The wonderful power of the X-Ray and mercury quartz light treatment is proved by the fact that they are accomplishing wonders in diseases of every description—catarrh, bronchitis, deafness, stomach, nerve and skin disease. No matter what your disease may be, remember Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., 18 Boylston St., will make good the above offer.

SKIN

MRS. BEATRICE GEORGE, 214 SARATOGA ST., E. BOSTON, SAYS: "I had been troubled with a skin rash on my right shoulder for four years. I had been treated by a famous skin specialist who did not help me. The skin rash was spreading down my back and chest. I read of Daniel J. Walsh, and out of curiosity I went to him. Now I am an ardent supporter of Daniel J. Walsh M. D., for in an incredible short time his new light treatment banished the skin rash and it has not returned although it has been a year since Daniel J. Walsh treated me. I am having him treat my small daughter for bronchial asthma and I hope he will be as successful in her case as he was in mine."

THROAT

MR. CHAS. W. HAYES, BRIDGE ST., HAMILTON, MASS., SAYS: "I had suffered from a throat trouble for two years. Since last Sept. I was unable to work on account of it. The only way I can describe the trouble is that it felt as though a tack was sticking in my throat which I could not dislodge. I had been treated by seven different doctors but none of them could relieve me, until I had Daniel J. Walsh treat me, and his treatment did the trick."

STOMACH

MRS. NELLIE COTTER, 22 EUSTIS ST., ROXBURY, MASS., SAYS: "I suffered greatly from Stomach and Gall Bladder trouble. I could not lie on my right side. I had a great deal of inflammation, gas and pain which kept me awake nights. A friend told me of Daniel J. Walsh, M. D., and I read a great many testimonials from patients who had been healed by Daniel J. Walsh M. D. His treatment did so much for me that I send my friends who suffer from any physical ailment to Daniel J. Walsh M. D., for relief."

Too Vital for Delay

Let the Government Build Boulder Dam and Allocate the Power

Josiah T. Newcomb, general counsel of the Electric Bond & Share Company, of New York, which controls 145 electric corporations, is in Washington leading the fight against the Swing-Johnson bill. The other day he made this statement:

> "I represent an investment of nine thousand millions of dollars, and we do not propose to let the Government enter the power business at Boulder Canyon."

That is a very large figure, yet probably not an overstatement. There is, however, another figure to be considered that is even larger. The Boulder Canyon development, when completely utilized, will create values which a number of appraisers estimate at not less than twelve thousand million dollars.

So, against the PRIVATE power companies' interest of NINE thousand million dollars there is the PUBLIC interest of TWELVE thousand million dollars.

It is also important to remember that the development as provided in the Swing-Johnson bill would enrich the entire nation. It would provide a market of vastly increased buying power for the goods produced in Eastern and Middle Western manufacturing centres. For instance, the General Electric Company, which does an immense business in that region, would find its sales increased many times.

There is still another factor to be considered—the element of time. There is no private power company ready to proceed with any construction program at Boulder Canyon. In the ordinary course it will be years before any private power company, which considers only the power angle, will be in position to undertake that development.

Let the Government build the dam and allocate the power, as provided for in the Swing-Johnson bill, and the Southwest, and the nation, would be reaping the full benefits of that project within ten years.

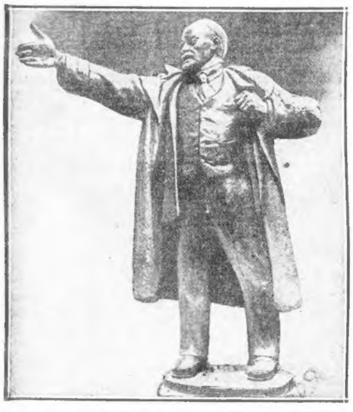
But wait for other interests to build the dam and at the end of the ten-year period, in the opinion of many qualified to speak with authority, the project would not even be started.

The difference between these two programs would represent an enormous loss to the nation at large, including some of the companies Mr. Newcomb speaks for, the General Electric, for example.

And the element of time is, of course, vital to Los Angeles and other Southern California cities which will need increased supplies of domestic water within a very few years.

Lenin as Russia Saw Him

There Is Power There and Intense Earnestness



LENIN'S NEW STATUE. THE CZAR WOULD TURN IN HIS GRAVE IF HE COULD SEE THIS.

This shows a closeup of the latest statue of Lenin. If the cruel Bolsheviki had not fixed the late Czar so that all emotion is over for him, this statue probably would annoy that Romanoff more than anything that happened.

For this lifelike statue of Lenin, shown as he used to stand telling what he thought about Czars, capitalists and such "trash," is to be placed in the garden of the Winter Palace, in which the Czar once lived, in St. Petersburg. And, horror of Romanoff horrors, that Winter Palace is now the official residence of Bolshevik administrators, and St. Petersburg is called "Leningrad," renamed for the man you see here.

The Russian artist evidently didn't believe in being too fancy or artistic. He shows Lenin as HE WAS, the big hand outstretched, one eye open, one closed, as he makes a point that will appeal to the listening workers. His left thumb is in the hole of his waistcoat. His whole attitude exhibits the courage and defiance that made it possible for him to hold Russia in the hollow of his hand, do away with all the Czars and their relatives, and send the Grand Dukes hurrying over the border, like so many mice running from a lantern.

You may or may not like Lenin's theories. You realize in any case that his plan of Communism won't last—human selfishness will dispose of that.

But you are interested in this Russian face that changed history and was able to keep the great powers of Europe out of Russia when they, and foolish Uncle Sam with them, tried to interfere with Bolshevik plans.

And when you remember that this man Lenin saw his own brother put to death by the Czar, merely because that brother had dared to express his own political opinions, you may feel differently about the things that Lenin did later.

LITTLE RED RIDING HOOD WITHOUT THE HOOD

THE SMOCK IS WELL RECOMMENDED

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE characteristic dress of the artist, the painters and sculpture men has always been the smock—that is, a loose, cotton garment which is worn over everything.

Now out of the artist's studio the smock has come into every other department of life, and its increased use recently has been significant.

The employment of the smock solves a great many problems. The smock is not necessarily drab and dull, but may be colored in any way and give full employment to one's artistic sense. It may be made very attractive.

It is useful in the schoolroom. The question of uniforms for school children is one that has been often urgently presented. The smock solves this question. Uniforms could be kept in the schoolroom and donned by the children when they appear. It would thus keep all their other clothes clean, at the same time giving them a pleasing personal appearance.

The smock is better than the apron in the kitchen as it covers all the clothes and is easily taken on and off, and the housewife may quickly throw it over her other clothes, preserve them from dirt, and be ready at any time by doffing the smock to make a presentable appearance to company.

The use of the smock has not been confined to women. Men are making use of the garment more and more.

Of course it always held sway in the artist's atelier, but it is now in use in chemical laboratories, factories, offices, newspaper composing rooms and telegraph rooms.

Its utility should not be over-emphasized, for it may be made smart. Its attractiveness offers unlimited possibilities

The smock combines ease and comfort with economy, serviceability and style.

In one office the boss's wife used it and recommended it, and it became universally adopted by the help.

On account of its artistic associations it comes well recommended and nobody should be ashamed to wear it.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

PRICE UP $172,800

LATEST prices of New York Stock Exchange seats at $175,000 each recall that the late FRANCIS B. COBB of Barnstable and Boston, father of WILLIAM COBB, former president of the Collateral Loan Co. on Cornhill, sold his Wall Street Stock Exchange seat for $2,200. A price appreciation of $172,800 in a comparatively few years would be hard to duplicate.

IN CHINESE WATERS.

Mention is made from day to day of the various American naval craft in Chinese waters, but the oddest Yankee boat of all has escaped general attention. It is the Portsmouth, a missionary craft designed to traverse inland waters. Funds for its building by a native carpenter who had never before built a boat were raised by PHILIP S. MARSHALL of Portsmouth, N. H. The Portsmouth carries workers of the Advent Christian Church.

IN THE DARK.

CHIEF BERNARD F. BURKE, of the NEWTON police, is not afraid of ghosts or anything like that but—many years ago, while a patrolman he got a shock. Entering the old lockup at Newton Corner he went into one of the dark cells for a drink of water. A short time previous another policeman had committed suicide in the cell. As "Barney" reached over to turn on the water, a clammy substance met his hand and dragged itself upward. Startled and white-faced he leaped for the door to meet roars of laughter. Another policeman had tied up a stray dog in the cell and Doggie merely wanted to be sociable by licking the policeman's hand.

TALKED IT OVER.

During the great strike in Fall River, in 1905, WILLIAM L. DOUGLAS, then Governor of the State, ended hostilities with the assistance of HERBERT T. DRAKE, superintendent of his factory in BROCKTON. Both sides involved in the controversy got together and talked their grievances over in a sane, practical way. At the end they understood each other and agreed to meet Governor Douglas who adjusted matters to the satisfaction of all concerned.

Messages From the Sun

By Garrett P. Serviss,

WHAT Michael Idvorsky Pupin meant when, in his address as retiring president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, he spoke of "messages from the sun" as the possible cause of the great radio burglar called "static," may serve to concentrate public attention upon the peculiarities of the "god of day."

If Professor Pupin really had it in his mind to suggest that some kind of intelligence might in some way be associated with the sun he is going no further than the great astronomers, Sir William and Sir John Herschel, went in the nineteenth century, though they did not know all that is now apparent to us about the physical constitution of the sun.

Both of them thought that the sun was a solid body surrounded by an intensely luminous atmosphere and that sunspots were openings in this incandescent atmosphere permitting the dark, or comparatively dark, body of the sun to be seen beneath.

The elder Herschel, Sir William, regarded the interior globe of the sun as not only solid, but cool and habitable. This is what he wrote about it:

"The sun viewed in this light" (that of theory) "appears to be nothing else than a very eminent, large and lucid planet. . . . Its similarity to the other globes of the solar system with regard to its solidity, its atmosphere, and its diversified surface; the rotation upon its axis, and the fall of heavy bodies, lead us on to suppose that it is most probably also inhabited like the rest of the planets by beings whose organs are adapted to the peculiar circumstances of that vast globe."

Many years later Sir John Herschel, become, in his turn the most conspicuous astronomer of his time, substantially reiterated his father's view of the structure of the sun's surface and atmosphere, but omitted the claim as to inhabitability, for he remarked that the apparently black surface disclosed through the sunspot openings might be fiery hot.

But he put forth a suggestion still more extraordinary than any of the elder Herschel's, concerning the nature of the dazzling flakelike specks seen with powerful telescopes covering the sun's surface. Remarking that these objects were evidently "the immediate sources of the solar light and heat," he continued:

"Looked at in this point of view, we cannot refuse to regard them as organisms of some peculiar and amazing kind; and though it would be too daring to speak of such organization as partaking of the nature of life, yet we do know that vital action is competent to develop both heat, light and electricity."

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

DO YOU like to contradict?
I do.

Of course you're not supposed to admit a private vice like that but this is an age of frank confession, so here goes mine.

I like to contradict. Nothing pleases me better than to crash into a conversation and tell my opponent that he's wrong. Naturally I camouflage my malicious joy. I don't pound the desk or jump on his tonsils, but I do manage to sneak in a few facts that make his statement look like a plugged nickel.

This habit has, however, one drawback.

It isn't always my opponent that looks like the plugged nickel when the smoke has lifted from the argument.

Sometimes it's Elsie herself!

For unfortunately, contradiction is a boomerang and often returns to the sender with a mean wallop.

Even if your facts are right, you may get yourself in wrong. For there's no act in the human program that heaps more dislike and actual hate than the habit of contradiction.

I have discovered this fact to my sorrow. And I note with pleasure that I'm not the first one to learn this harrowing lesson. I have illustrious predecessors. For example, Mr. Benjamin Franklin.

Shot the Works.

Benjamin Franklin wrote an autobiography. It is, perhaps, as frank and complete a statement as ever a human gentleman compiled. If Ben had any enemies who hoped to profit by blackmail, that book foiled them completely. For he certainly shot the works!

And this is what he says about his tendency to contradict, and how he scotched it.

"I made it a rule to forbear all direct contradiction to the sentiments of others, and all positive assertions of my own. I even forbade myself the use of every word or expression in the language that imported a fix'd opinion, such as certainly, undoubtedly, etc., and I adopted, instead of them, I apprehend, or I imagine a thing to be so or so; or it so appears to me at present.

Denied "Pleasure."

"When another asserted something that I thought an error I deny'd myself the pleasure of contradicting him abruptly, and of showing immediately some absurdity in his proposition; and in answering I began by observing that in certain cases or circumstances his opinion would be right, but in the present case there appear'd or seem'd to me some difference, etc.

"I soon found the advantage of this change in my manner; the conversations I engag'd in went on more pleasantly. The modest way in which I propos'd my opinions procur'd them a readier reception and less contradiction; I had less mortification when I was found to be in the wrong and I more easily prevail'd with others to give up their mistakes and join with me when I hapened to be right."

Benjamin Franklin has been called "the first civilized American." I wonder if his controversial attitude isn't the very highest proof of his civilization?

How much of a proof of YOUR civilization is YOUR controversial attitude?

I'd hate to be judged by mine!
